Hanging a Child's Brain
Who Is Karpoff?
The King Is Elected
Expensive Shirts

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

Coldly the news comes in over wires, cables, through telephone receivers and by wireless. How does it all impress the Angel Gabriel, as he writes it down, with the name of the guilty and the deserving? What a huge book must lie before him on his desk.

Wade, proved by experts to have the brain of a child eleven years old, is to be hanged for murder. The judge adds to the sentence: "May God have mercy on your soul." The condemned man says, "thank you," and smiles. In the days of Ben Franklin, whose birthday comes next Monday, they used to hang children eleven years old. We don't do that now, but we hang men with the brains of children.

The hanging news comes from New England. From London, most important of the day's news, if true, comes by way of Berlin. The statement that "Karpoff" is dead. Karpoff is the name under which Lenin is known to some of his friends. It is the name signed to his writings in days when the Czar was hunting for him to send him back to Siberia before Lenin had sent the Czar to his long rest.

Yesterday you read that Lenin, suddenly ill, had sent for three specialists from Berlin. That sounded like poison. If he is dead today, if "Karpoff" is Lenin, and Lenin is dead, it is a great piece of world news.

What would follow his death? Probably a military dictatorship headed by Trotzky, who has proved his fighting quality. Would Trotzky last long without Lenin, his balance-wheel? Probably not. Then would come chaos.

Next, perfectly seriously, the London Times announces George of England "has just been elected a member of the Large Black Pig Society." The King breeds fine Berkshire swine and recently sold some to the King of Spain. Sinn Fein will say that the King's election was appropriate, that the head of the British Empire should belong to that particular society.

Senator McCormick and the French nation are stirred because the Senator paid $8.52 each for shirts bought on the Rue De La Paix. The Senator says France exploits American travellers, and the French newspapers sympathize with him.

When he arrives in New York Mr. McCormick can get another shock. In Fifth avenue, which is our Rue De La Paix, on the right hand side, going north, a little above Delmonico's, let the Senator drop in and order a dozen shirts, and see what happens.

If he orders silk golf shirts, he will pay $30 apiece. And if he says, "Make me the cheapest shirt you have in the house," his bill will be $16 apiece, double what he paid in Paris. When it comes to charging for shirts, the Rue De La Paix has something to learn from Fifth avenue.

P. S.—In justice to a competitor, is should be said that on the opposite side of Fifth avenue, a little farther north, another shirt man charges prices even higher.

David Lazarus, primary politician and leader, thinks that hard times will kill off socialism. Says he: "If the unemployment keeps up, we won't be bothered by the Socialists so much in the future. They won't be so high and mighty when they're out of a job. It's easy to be a Socialist when you have a $60 or $70 a-week job, but when you're out of work you turn to the organization that can get you something to do."

Mr. Lazarus of Tammany Hall is mistaken. It is poverty, not wealth that makes Socialists. The original Lazarus was probably more of a Socialist while picking the crumbs and eating them than later, when he was provided for.

The ablest socialistic leader in this country, with at least 50,000 individual followers, admitted that he would lose more than 49,500 of them if each should inherit $50,000. The best antidote for radicalism is prosperity. Poverty causes anxiety, anxiety causes thought. Look out for thought—it is explosive.

One of the most important officials engaged in enforcing prohibition says that prohibition is impossible for the present, but will come, after this generation, among people that do not know the taste of whiskey or the inclination for it.

What about the Red men whom the fur traders met with their whiskey bottles in the early days? Those Red men didn't know anything about whiskey, they had gone without it for many centuries, and so far as alcohol is concerned, every one of them was as pure as William Jennings Bryan himself. They took to whiskey rather suddenly when the chance came.

Roslindale Department Helps Fight Flames, but Big School Is Destroyed

The Avery Grammar School on High street, East Dedham, was destroyed by flames, believed to have started in the boiler room of the two and a half story wooden structure early today.

A general alarm was sounded, to which the entire Dedham fire department responded, together with engine 45 from Roslindale. The school committee placed the loss at $200,000, based on the cost of replacing the structure with materials at their present high figure.

A special meeting of the school committee will be held to decide what disposition can be made of the 450 primary and grammar school pupils

PROF. VAUGHAN SEES PERIL IN WAR ON LABOR

"What Is Behind the Open Shop Campaign?" was the subject of a talk given by Professor David D. Vaughan of the Boston University School of Theology in Jacob Sleeper Hall. He declared the open shop drive to be "against the union principle of collective bargaining," and said that "revolutionary methods will be necessary if the campaign against labor continues." Other speakers were Dr. Albert C. Dieffenbach, editor of the Christian Register, and Professor Vida D. Scudder of Wellesley College.

$500,000 LOST BY BAY STATE VICTIMS, SAYS HURWITZ

Massachusetts victims of the alleged "German mark" swindles, in which two arrests have been made and more are expected, have been mulcted of at least $500,000, according to Assistant Attorney-General Albert Hurwitz today. He estimated that the average investment was about $100, and the total number of victims in this State about 5,000.

Storm Keeps Wilson From Theatre

Washington, Jan. 14.—It was learned today that had it not been for the extremely bad weather in Washington last night President Wilson would have appeared in public for the first time since he returned from his League of Nations tour over a year ago, "a very sick man."

Arrangements were all made for the President to view the production at a local theatre last night. Secret Service men and the President's physician looked over the ground in advance. They decided it could be done, but the weather turned so stormy and cold that at the last moment it was deemed inadvisable to attempt it.

President Wilson is an ardent vaudeville "fan." His last appearance in a theatre was in August, 1919.

Rain Follows Snow Flurries Here

Rain followed the light fall of snow and the temperature in Boston was much warmer today. It was either raining or snowing during the forenoon all over New England.

The weather forecaster's predictions were upset by the sudden rise in temperature, as it was thought that the cold spell which set in Tuesday night would continue for a few days and be followed by an old-fashioned blizzard.

The mercury rose gradually from 24 at 3 a. m. to 31 at 10 a. m.

VICTIMS INCLUDE MANY WOMEN

A gigantic swindle in counterfeit German marks, in which millions of dollars have been made throughout the country, largely from women, was revealed today following the arrest of officers of the firm of "Rothchild-Campbell Company, Ltd., foreign exchange brokers."

Attorney-General Allen today estimated that at least half a million dollars had been taken from Massachusetts investors.

While all the details had not been secured by the authorities today, their investigations were said to have disclosed a swindle of such colossal proportions as to cause the operations of Charles Ponzi to pale into insignificance.

According to the police where Ponzi defrauded thousands, the purveyors of counterfeit marks have robbed many more persons throughout the United States.

The nature of the gigantic fraud was first brought to light locally with the arrest of Nathaniel R. Goodman of Boston and Abraham Horowitz of Worcester.

Goodman was said to have been a

THIRTEEN BUILDINGS BURN IN CLEARFIELD, PA.

Clearfield, Pa., Jan. 14.—Thirteen buildings in the business section here, including a hotel, five stores and several residences, were destroyed by fire early today, causing an estimated loss of $100,000. Fire departments from several nearby towns helped stop the spread of the flames. Reports indicate the fire was of incendiary origin.

OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC

BY SIMON SWIG, VICE-PRESIDENT

Now that the Legislature is in session, this is the opportune and psychological time for the bankers of Massachusetts to ask for the enactment of a measure to require the payment of interest monthly, and from the time of deposit of savings by savings banks, institutions for savings and trust companies.

Last year I succeeded in obtaining legislation to permit monthly payments; previously such payment was forbidden. Apparently the Tremont Trust Co. is the only bank to avail itself of such permission. We do not want a patent on the privilege, neither do we desire to benefit by it alone. In the spirit of unselfishness and justice, we urge that depositors in all banks should enjoy the advantage afforded by the Tremont's policy of monthly payment. That allows of the withdrawal of money at any time without the loss of interest practically. Under the quarterly or semi-annual system of paying interest, a depositor who takes out his savings even a day before interest day gets no share of the earnings for the full period of three or six months. That is not right.

My suggestion that the banks ought to lend money to savings depositors in the closed banks to meet Christmas needs I am glad to say was heeded by them. I had but a single purpose in making it—to demonstrate the close relationship and the interdependence between depositors and bankers.

When Gov. Coolidge was considering the appointment of a bank commissioner at the close of Mr. Thorndike's term, I wrote the following letter to the executive about the kind of man the State should have to safeguard the people's interests:

Jan. 13, 1920.

His Excellency Calvin Coolidge,
State House, Boston, Mass.

Dear Governor—

I am taking the liberty of writing you on a matter that lies close to the well-being of the people of this Commonwealth. I deem it of supreme importance, else I should not trouble you about it. Since you have been Governor I have sought but one conference with you, and that about the payment of monthly interest by savings institutions. The matter of present moment is of as great importance, as it affects the interest of the thousands of depositors in our banking and savings institutions, and that of thousands of business men and manufacturers dependent upon our banks for their prosperity. I refer to the appointment of a bank commissioner.

I have no name to suggest; that is not the purpose of my writing. I want to speak in a general way of the kind of man needed for that most responsible position. I believe that my experience as a banker and as a member of the committee on banks and banking for several years in the Legislature, part of the time as chairman, qualifies me to speak.

Were there bank commissioners in the days of Rufus Choate, he would have said of them as he said of Judges: "A judge must be a man not merely upright, not honest and well-intentioned—this of course—but a man who will not respect persons . . . He shall do everything for justice, nothing for his sovereign." A bank commissioner should be that sort of man. He must have independence, courage of convictions, common sense and an inherent sense of justice. He must zealously protect the people and protect the banks. A banking institution is a delicate edifice; it can be a rock of Gibraltar or a house of cards.

Let a bank pursue the even tenor of its way and it moves along strong and majestic, building up communities, promoting commerce and industry, and encouraging thrift and savings; but let it make one false step or let it become the victim of the jealousy of its rivals, or of the evil report of its enemies, or of the gossip of scandal mongers, or of the spite of the bank commissioner, and down it comes, as a house of cards, bringing ruin to many.

A bank commissioner can make or break a bank; he can make it safe or unsafe. No bank is safe with a commissioner who will play favorites; no bank is safe with a commissioner who will permit his office to be used by scheming bankers to wreak vengeance on their rivals; no bank is safe with a commissioner who will allow his whims and fancies to affect his official action; no bank is safe with a commissioner with a hobby; no bank is safe with a commissioner who will allow any man or men, or any bank or banks to dictate the policies of his office, or the business methods of other banks; no bank is safe with a commissioner who will use his office to allow the large banks to crush the small banks.

There is room for the small bank as well as for the large bank. Each has its part to play in the upbuilding of a community. The avarice, the jealousy, the ambition or the designs of large banks should not be allowed in any way to interfere with the integrity or growth, and the prosperity of the smaller banks. It is within the power of an arbitrary commissioner with a word to smash every bank in Massachusetts.

An arbitrary man has no place in the bank commissioner's office. A constructive man is needed, and when occasion requires chastisement of a bank or its officers for neglect of duty, or for a technical violation of law, there is no need of announcing the chastisement with a blare of trumpets or with the despatch of fleet rumor mongers.

Injury to a banking institution means not only injury to that institution, but to many others. It means not only injury to the pride and honor of the men who direct the institution, but it also means financial loss to thousands of depositors who can ill afford any loss. A banking institution is not to be trifled with; it is not to be made the toy of schemers either within or without. The administration of its affairs by those within should be held as a sacred trust; those without should regard it as a holy temple, not to be defiled nor scandalized.

A bank commissioner should be one who has had, and will have, no social, financial nor political affiliations with any bank or banks, banker or bankers. He should be free and untrammeled, and with an eye single to an honest, impartial, intelligent and helpful administration of his office. Such a man will never bring nor permit disaster to come to any bank; and he will strengthen the confidence the people rightfully have in our Massachusetts banks and savings institutions.

I should like the privilege of an interview with you to discuss this matter before you appoint the official who, under the consolidation law, will have the banks under his supervision. Kindly advise me when I may have this interview.

Very sincerely,

SIMON SWIG
Vice-President Tremont Trust Co.

I had the interest of depositors at heart in sending my appeal to the Governor; it is the same interest which inspires me to urge upon the bankers that they ask the Legislature for a law to compel the payment of interest each month from the time that savings deposits are placed with them. If they pay heed to the suggestion, they will realize the benefit that will accrue, because millions that are now invested in wild-cat schemes will find their way to the banks for safe keeping and profit.

SIMON SWIG,
Vice-President
TREMONT TRUST COMPANY

and Supreme Court Justices L. Lewis Fawcett and Norman S. Dyke.

Throughout the night there were fixed posts at these residences while members of the automobile rifle squads and the roving motorcycle policemen sped through the streets on patrol.

Among the buildings carefully guarded by police during the night were St. Patrick's Cathedral, City Hall, Postoffice, Stock Exchange, Grand Central and Pennsylvania stations; bridge across East River; Municipal Building, Yale and Union League clubs, Museum of Natural History, Metropolitan Art Museum, New York Edison plant; Kings County lighting plant, Central Park reservoir, the sub-treasury, criminal courts building and several churches.

William J. Flynn, in charge of the Department of Justice intelligence service, toured the city in a high-powered automobile, accompanied by six plain clothes men, visiting all the special police details to make certain that they remained on duty. Later a deputy police commissioner made a similar flying trip.

Seldom have police forces been mobilized so quickly. There were rumors that a bomb plot had been discovered, but there was no confirmation of this.

Credence was given the bomb plot theory by the fact that the police bomb squad, under Detective Sergeant Gegan, was ordered out for special duty.

But members of this squad were silent "on orders" today. Many of the special police guards were summoned from their beds and hurried to the emergency posts.

George F. Lamb, head of the local bureau of the Department of Justice, declared today that his office had nothing to do with the plans to guard buildings. He said he knew nothing about the matter except what he had read in the newspapers.

In Brooklyn, as in Manhattan and the Bronx, power stations, gas reservoirs and electric plants were among places guarded by a number of armed policemen. It was believed that secret information of an alleged bomb plot obtained suddenly by Federal operatives and as quickly communicated to the police resulted in the hurried mobilization of extra precautionary police.

PHILADELPHIA SCARE.

"He is out on duty with his men."

One explanation was that police activity may have grown out of a scare at Philadelphia where rumors had gained circulation yesterday that there would be a "night of bombing and terrorism" following a demonstration and parade by the unemployed.

However, this was proved to be groundless, the Philadelphia police learning that only a midnight parade, not in any way anarchistic, was planned, but called off when Philadelphia police officials arranged for extra details of patrolmen.

SUES CITY FOR $225,000

Builders of Dorchester Tunnel Ask Damages for Floods and Other Causes

Action to recover damages from the city of Boston aggregating $225,000 has been filed in Federal Court by the T. A. Gillespie Company, a New Jersey corporation of contractors.

The sum claimed is for extra compensation in connection with the building of three sections of the Dorchester tunnel and represents the total of three sums, respectively $60,000, $65,000 and $100,000.

The company claims that a necessary break in a sewer system, flooding of the excavations and other causes compelled extra labor and the use of extra derricks, drills and other machinery.

FINDS CITY FULL OF BAD MEAT

New Hampshire Official Says Manchester Is Market for Tubercular Cattle

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 14.—Manchester is the "dumping ground" for the meat and milk of tubercular cattle, according to Dr. J. G. Whitney of the State Board of Health.

This alarming statement was made following the discovery that the milk of two cows had been sold in this city a few hours before they were slaughtered and found to be tubercular.

Dr. Whitney declared that the greater part of the State-grown meat supplied the Manchester and other city markets is tubercular, and that 60 per cent. of the milk furnished urban residents is from tubercular cows.

He asserted that 10 per cent. of all cases of children affected with tuberculosis are due to the drinking of this tubercular milk, and that the public are helpless under existing laws.

Meat is not inspected here, he said, because of the lack of State laws to that effect, the few State inspectors and the absence of proper city ordinances and officials.

Furthermore he pointed out that only the largest firms are in a position to pasteurize their supply of milk. The dangerous milk is alleged to come from the smaller domestic dealers.

So serious is the situation considered that the Chamber of Commerce has been asked to call a mass meeting to insist upon the framing of State laws to compel the inspection of cattle slaughtered in New Hampshire. Physicians and veterinaries declare that the present State and municipal laws are utterly inadequate to compel such inspection.

The Roxbury man says that his brother left America, December 5, for Ireland to visit his mother, who was ill. He was arrested on a charge of attempting to murder an Irish policeman, although, according to letters written to his brother here and to other relatives, he was in another town preparing for his return to the United States when the officer was killed.

Peter Moylan is a former member of the Metropolitan Park police and for a number of years was with the Nantasket Beach Reservation force. He enlisted in the navy at the entry of the United States into the World War, and after serving more than two years was placed on reserve.

His letter to his brother said that he had sent his discharge papers and his citizenship certificate to the American consul at Dublin, but had not received any answer, nor had he been able to gain response to his plea for immediate trial on the murder charge.

BANDITS FAILS TO OPEN RAILROAD STATION SAFE

Miss Dorothy Brenner, 20 years old, of No. 8 West One Hundred and Nineteenth street, New York, who was awarded a verdict of $45,000 by a New York jury for the loss of her left leg in an elevator accident. At the same time, in the same building another jury awarded Tommy Clark, a small boy, $42,500 for the loss of both limbs.

Is one leg of a twenty-year-old girl worth more than both legs of a small boy?

What is the process of reasoning leading to the apparent decision that the girl suffered and will suffer more anguish than the boy?

This decision was made by a New York jury, who awarded Miss Dorothy Brenner $45,000 for the loss of her left leg in an elevator accident.

In the same courthouse another jury gave Tommy Clark $42,500 after both legs had been taken off by a trolley car, and the lad's life had been saved by transfusions of blood from his father's veins.

In the Brenner case the girl's father, Benjamin Brenner of No. 8 West 119th street, sued for $100,000 for the loss of his daughter's services.

The jury made no explanation of their high award.

In the case of the boy, who will require two nurses and rest in the country for several years before he is able to walk, even with crutches, the jury appeared satisfied they had made a just award.

There are four other little Clarks in the family at No. 275 West 143rd street, all supported by the wages of Thomas Clark, Sr., a bakery wagon driver.

Tommy Clark suffered five operations after the car lopped off his feet last Summer. For seven months he hovered on the edge of death. When the award was announced Tommy glanced at his mutilated legs and wept.

It was believed that the pupils of the higher grades would be sent to the old high school on Bryant street, and the lower grade pupils to the Quincy school, East Dedham, and the Hopedale school. These pupils had a holiday today.

The fire was discovered by Peter Helmar, who saw smoke issuing from the basement and gave the alarm. When the apparatus arrived the flames were shooting through the building, and Chief Henry Harrigan sent in a general alarm.

Because of the proximity to dwellings in the East Dedham square residential section, many families left their homes when sparks were blown to the roofs. Firemen with lines of small hose were detailed to extinguish any blazes which might start.

persons, including two sisters, were wounded on O'Connell bridge last night in a mysterious affray. British troops say they fired after they were attacked. Eyewitnesses deny this.

Only one shot was heard at the bridge, but some of the wounded fell in adjoining side streets. There was a large crowd upon the scene watching the soldiers searching motor cars.

Two Black and Tans were wounded in an ambuscade at Cullyhanna, in County Armagh. Reinforcements were attacked while on their way to assist the police party that had originally been ambushed.

A heavy detachment of military policemen, filling six lorries, made widespread raids along the Springfield road in Belfast today, combing the whole neighborhood in their search for arms.

Machine guns, trench helmets and dugouts are now playing a part in Irish warfare.

Dublin Castle, in an official report, said military policemen on patrol duty at Blarney saw a woman run across a field and drop something. The policemen followed and found she had dropped part of the mechanism of a machine gun. The field was then searched, continued the statement, and the policemen found dugouts, holding three rifles, four machine guns, drums of gelignite, a number of revolvers, 1,000 rounds of ammunition, steel helmets, pikes and uniforms of the Irish Republican army. Letters were seized that resulted in several arrests.

Lee Shubert Denies Barring of Equity Association Chorus Girls

By International News Service.

New York, Jan. 14.—Another strike of actors and actresses, members of the Actors Equity Association, loomed in the offing today as the Producing Managers Association met to hear charges that have been made against Lee and J. J. Shubert, who control about 75 per cent. of the theatres throughout the country.

The Actors Equity Association has demanded the expulsion of the Shuberts from the Producing Managers Association, with which the Equity has a five-year contract, on the ground that the Shuberts have violated the terms of the peace agreement that settled the actors' strike a year ago and that they persistently discriminate against Equity members.

"The charges are based on the complaints of six chorus girls," he said. "I know nothing about the merit of their complaint. It may be that we are guilty of minor infractions of the rules. We employ more than 1,000 actors and actresses. I have no way of knowing everything that my company managers are doing.

"It is untrue that we have refused to employ girls because they were members of the Equity. We employ girls for their beauty and talent."

member of the firm of Rothchild-Campbell Company, and Horowitz, according to the police, was its Worcester manager.

The two men were taken into custody in Worcester, following an investigation of the complaints of customers by Assistant District Attorney-General Hurwitz.

The alleged dupes had bought German marks at low prices after reading get-rich-quick advertisements of the firm, the Boston office of which was located at No. 24 Kilby street.

The complainants declared they had been promised big profits on their six months' options, but had found the Boston and Springfield offices closed.

$100,000 IN WORCESTER.

According to District Attorney Esty of Worcester County the company did a business of $100,000 in that city.

Following the arrest of Goodman and Horowitz, the police sought two other men, one said to be a former Boston policeman.

It was learned that these men, alleged members of the firm, had been seen on States street within ten days, but had since dropped out of sight.

POSED AS CURB BROKERS.

The authorities then began to investigate the Rothchild-Campbell Company. It was found that the firm, under the name of the Alberton D. Leonard Company of New York, rented the Kilby street offices two years ago.

The lease was drawn by a member of the firm, it was stated, but the company opened for business under the name of Leonard, Chandler and Dopp of Wall street.

They professed to be curb brokers and specialized in Arizona Annex, Haines Divide and Congressional Oil stocks.

The company continued this business for some time, until the craze for foreign exchange took hold of investors in this country, when they began an advertising campaign to sell German marks.

The authorities said that each member of the firm had a 10 per cent. interest in the company. One member was also said to have been associated with the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, Ponzi's rival.

Last September, it was said, the Rothchild-Campbell Company asked permission to sub-let, and on being refused, removed to No. 67 Milk street, to the offices of the Rees, Lloyd firm. They were said to have continued business there for about three months, when the business was disposed of to the S. S. Lewis Company, brokers.

QUARREL AMONG SELVES.

While the Rothchild-Campbell Company was in operation, it was said that a certain member of the firm complained to the Commissioner of Corporations that another was not permitting the customers to re-option or buy at the end of the six-months' period. No official action was taken, but it was said that as a result some of the members withdrew from the firm.

Following the closing of the Boston office of the company, scores of women have made daily visits hoping to obtain information as to their investments. It was said that many of these women were girl stenographers and clerks.

Goodman, who is under arrest, lived at a Back Bay hotel, it was said, and maintained a Summer residence at Nantasket. He was said to have hailed from New Haven, and according to the police has a number of creditors in this city. Another member of the firm was said to have been connected with the East Dedham street station when the police went on strike.

LYNN MAYOR ASKS TAX ASSESSMENT REFORM

Lowell, Jan. 14.—Appropriation of $103,278.54 for city creditors was voted at a meeting of the Municipal Council. The Council referred a letter from Mayor Walter H. Creamer of Lynn, asking the Lowell Council to co-operate with the Lynn City Council in obtaining tax assessment reforms, to the Mayor and the City Solicitor.

ASKS $11,215 FOR ARM OF SOLDIER

Providence, Jan. 14.—Damages of $11,215.74 for the loss of the right arm of Frederick H. MacAuley, Jr., a private in the Bristol battery of artillery, are provided for in a resolution introduced into the Senate by Senator Coggeshall of Bristol. The measure was tabled to await appointment of committees. At the time of the injury MacAuley was firing the national salute and the cannon exploded.

MAINE WOMEN CHARGE DOCTORS' "TRUST" IS IMPERILING LIFE

REFUSING TO MAKE TRIPS

Houlton Physicians Insist That Country Patients Be Sent to Hospitals

Houlton, Me., Jan. 14.—Babies are being born without medical attendance and the sick are going without proper care in tre rural homes of Aroostook County as a result of a pact entered into by what people are beginning to call "the doctor's trust."

By this agreement the seven physicians of Houlton have bound themselves not to answer calls to attend maternity cases in the rural homes.

They insist that the women be brought into the hospitals, which is in some cases impossible except at the cost of intense suffering on the part of patients residing on the lonely farms.

Conditions in the outlying villages are described as worse than those in new and crude frontier communities unknown to doctors and nurses.

Already one infant has died at birth, and women here blame the doctors for their failure to visit the young mother in her home in time.

LOVE OF COMFORT.

Led by the women, the residents of the countryside are making a bitter and determined drive upon the physicians in an effort to move them from their position.

The women say that the doctors not only insist on forcing expectant mothers into hospitals, but refuse to treat other sick people in their homes.

They say the underlying cause of the unique compact is the love of comfort on the part of the doctors, who object to the long drives over lonely country roads late at night, to carry comfort and healing to the afflicted.

Ned Limerick and other towns on the Bangor & Aroostook railroad are practically deprived of medical aid when they need it most. Farmers' wives are leading the fight to force the physicians to change this decision.

CONDEMNS DOCTORS.

Mrs. Albert Hatfield of New Limerick, a well-known resident of the county, has written a letter to the newspapers scathingly denouncing the doctors for their course.

She declares the physician who will not sacrifice something of his comfort to alleviate suffering is a disgrace to his profession and of no use to the community.

Mrs. Hatfield personally knew of the young mother who was left without medical attendance until it was too late to save the life of her baby. She says:

"Infant mortality in the rural sections has been laid to farmers, and their alleged practice of working their wives so they cannot bear and rear strong children.

"But coming to the pith of the matter we learn that there is much indignation among the women of the country districts toward the doctors of Houlton for their indiscriminate command that all cases be taken to hospitals.

"Whether it be an expectant mother or an old lady of eighty that is in need of a physician, they receive the same reply 'Come to the hospital.'

LITTLE LIFE SACRIFICED.

"This indignation was raised to fury the other night when a young wife became ill and it was evident a physician's aid was needed. She had put off engaging a doctor, thinking there was plenty of time. The young husband anticipated no difficulty. The weather was fine, the roads to Houlton in good condition.

"He was less confident after telephoning three or four doctors. They began to make excuses. He called every doctor in Houlton. The doctors told him they had signed the agreement not to go into the country at night on confinement cases. They offered to send an ambulance and have the woman taken to a hospital.

"The frightened young husband finally prevailed on one physician to come, by telling him his wife was too ill to be moved. But he was too late to be of much assistance. A little life was sacrificed as a result. The woman endured hours of unnecessary suffering.

"Just think of it. For reasons of convenience doctors whose very calling should teach self-sacrifice sign a contract to the effect that they will not go into the country after nightfall."

"What is it, Mother? Please give me some, quick," said Betty, when she first saw Ancre Cheese. Now she eats it all the time.

DENIES SHAKEUP IS COMING

Long Island Head Says Mayor's Visit Is to "Re-Create Confidence"

Mayor Peters and members of the visiting medical staff of Long Island Hospital will visit that institution tomorrow for a conference with the resident medical staff, it was announced at City Hall today. The visit is in response to an invitation by Institutions Commission Thomas C. O'Brien.

In denial of rumors that the projected visit meant a forthcoming shakeup in the Long Island staff, Commissioner O'Brien said today the purpose of the visit was chiefly to "re-create confidence in the Long Island Hospital."

His reference was to statements, since refuted, which were made concerning the conduct of affairs at the hospital during hearings on the removal of Dr. Donlan as superintendent. Commissioner O'Brita declared he felt the visit to be very important.

"I know of no shakeup, and have no information to lead me to believe that one is planned," said he. "Unfortunately an impression exists in some quarters that many people go to Long Island to die, whereas the death rate is exceptionally low.

"It is the only hospital for treatment of chronic diseases in the State, and patients receive expert care from the foremost specialists."

The party will leave Boston on the 1 p. m. boat, arriving at the island for luncheon at 1:30, after which the conference will be called. Addresses will be made by Dr. James J. Minot, president of the visiting medical staff; Dr. E. Wyllys Taylor, secretary and visiting neurologist, and Dr. Robert Souter, visiting orthopedic surgeon, all three connected with the Massachusetts General Hospital. Dr. Souter is also on the staff of the Children's Hospital.

LEADERS IN CONGRESS BACK LEGION'S PROGRAM

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 14.—More than a hundred letters indicating that congressional leaders are "squarely behind" the American Legion program for rehabilitation of disabled World War veterans, have been received by F. W. Galbraith, Jr., national commander of the Legion, it was announced at national headquarters today.

Favorable replies to the memorial calling attention to the rehabilitation situation have been received from the secretary of the President, Senators Kenyon, La Follette, McCormick, New and Walsh, and from Champ Clark and other House leaders, it was stated.

HUSBAND ENDS LIFE AFTER SHOOTING WIFE

Muskegon, Mich., Jan 14.—Irvin Morton, 25 years old, early today entered his wife's bedroom and announcing "I've just killed the cat and you are next," fired twelve bullets into Mrs. Morton's body as she lay abed. The thirteenth bullet he turned on himself, killing himself almost instantly. Mrs. Morton crawled through the snow to a neighbor's home. She told physicians she pleaded for thirty minutes with her husband to spare her life, but was answered with abuse. Doctors believe she will live.

SHARON FIREMEN HURT BY FALLING CHIMNEY

Sharon, Jan. 14.—A blazing motor fire truck and frozen hydrants delayed firemen from getting streams of water onto the burning residence of Frank M. Trafton on Upland Road until the flames had gained great headway.

Chief Gillespie and Hoseman Mortensen and Legee were injured when the chimney fell. Exploding bullets in the storeroom of Mr. Trafton, who kept a large outfit of hunting supplies, also endangered the fire fighters.

ENGLAND'S DEBT NEARLY 8,000,000,000 POUNDS

London, Jan. 14.—England's national debt is now 7,831,744,300 pounds sterling, it was revealed by a government white paper.

The pre-war value of the English pound was $4.86. At the present rate of exchange the English pound is worth $3.72½ in United States money.

Say 'Shin Fain' and You'll Be Right

SINN FEIN—PRONOUNCE IT SHIN FAIN. DAIL EIREANN—PRONOUNCE IT DHOWIL AYRIN.

Owing to the frequency and prominence of the appearance of the words "Sinn Fein" and "Dail Eireann" in the news of the day, the Boston American has asked Martin Mulroy, well known as an Irish historian, teacher of Gaelic and prominent in the workings of Irish societies, to give definitions and some explanation of both.

"Sinn Fein," said Mr. Mulroy, "pronounced 'Shin Fain,' means literally 'We, ourselves.'

"It had its origin in the movement for the revival of Gaelic literature and the rejuvenation of Irish industries.

"The people of Erin were determined to speak their own tongue and to eliminate English and English made products for Gaelic and the products of Ireland and the Irish.

"Dail Eireann, pronounced 'Dhowil Ayrin, means translated exactly, 'Meeting of Erin.'

"It was the old Parliament of Ireland, powerful as a law-making body as far back as 750 B. C.

"That was the time of Ollav Fodhla, the great Irish law-giver. In a word the Dail Eireann might be described as the predecessor of the New England town meeting and was much the same as the 'folk moot' of the Scandinavian and North German tribes.

"It held annual conventions or gatherings at Tara, where communal and intercommunal arrangements were completed.

"Even in those old days the records show that Ireland had woman suffrage, for there are proofs of gatherings of women as a part of the Parliament for the enactment of laws governing the women of the country, and just as carefully enforced as the laws for the men."

CALLS CHURCHES TO FIGHT CRIME

Pastor Soper Plans Union Drive in Somerville Against Lawlessness

A call has been issued to the Protestant churches of the Union square section of Somerville by the Rev. Dr. George E. Soper, pastor of the Prospect Hill Congregational Church, to merge with his church to fight lawlessness.

Dr. Soper's call has been considered by his own church and a committee appointed to take the matter up with other Protestant churches.

He believes that if a commission of five from each of the other churches gets together with a commission from his church and threshes out the matter they will be able to accomplish something.

"In the first place," says Dr. Soper, "there is lawlessness abroad throughout the United States that bids fair to weaken our free institutions and undermine the Christian home and State. This condition comes as a challenge to every Christian citizen to come to the rescue by every individual and co-operative endeavor.

"In meeting this challenge in our portion of the city we are hampered by having too many Protestant churches. The many energies of the average church are expended in their own upkeep. The church has no time or strength left to minister to the community except in the ordinary ways of teaching and inspiration."

Dr. Soper then went on to outline his plan for a union of all the Protestant churches. He referred to the fact that union services had been mentioned for several years and emphasised the need for them at the present time. The report of the church showed a prosperous year with a balance left in the treasury after all bills had been paid.

PLAN TO DELAY EVICTIONS

Mayor Ashley of New Bedford Calls Meeting of Realty Owners in Housing Crisis

New Bedford, Jan. 14.—In an effort to prevent wholesale evictions of tenants who cannot pay their rent on account of unemployment, Mayor Charles S. Ashley announced today he would call a meeting of realty owners for a conference on ways and means to tide over the situation.

It has been estimated by Secretary Charles A. Poirier of the Poor Department that as many as 2,000 families are affected. Hardly a day passes, he declared, that several applicants for public aid do not come in and show eviction notices.

Mayor Ashley said today he believed the worst of the unemployment situation had passed and that with co-operation on the part of realty owners who could stand the strain financially for a few weeks longer disastrous hardships on the part of the poor could be avoided.

Several mills, he pointed out, that have been closed for months are now beginning to resume work on a normal basis. One starts on full time next Monday; another on a greatly increased schedule, and so on. Within two or three weeks at the most, the Mayor believes, conditions will have greatly improved.

According to Secretary Poirier, many families are ten weeks behind with their rent, and many landlords are unable to "carry on" without financial return on their investments.

KERENSKY PLOTTING TO SEIZE RUSSIA AGAIN

Paris, Jan. 14.—A scheme by Kerensky to seize power in Russia was discussed by the Russian constitutional assembly in secret session, following the receipt of reports that Lenin is extremely ill and not expected to live more than a few days.

While officials are silent, high placed observers here believe that the French government has already signified its willingness to support any counter - revolutionary movement which shows a chance of unseating the Soviets.

PROVIDENCE MAN HELD ON GOLD THEFT CHARGE

Providence, Jan. 14. — Frank L. Miller, thirty-four years old, of No. 83 Burnside street, was arrested here by Inspector John McGuire charged with the larceny of sixty-one pennyweight of gold, valued at $61, from Wightman & Hough, manufacturing jewelers.

According to the police and officials of the company thefts of gold have extended over a long period of time. Miller is employed by the company as foreman of the coloring department.

MARY GARDEN IS OPERA HEAD

She will succeed Herbert Johnson who resigned as active director, and Cino Marinuzzi as artistic director. Both these positions have been abolished. The announcement was made by Charles G. Dawes, chairman of executive committee.

The change, which Mr. Dawes said became effective at once, places Miss Garden in entire charge as general director of the affairs of the company under the executive committee. Mr. Marinuzzi will remain with the company as conductor.

Miss Garden was not at her apartments in the Blackstone Hotel last night. Neither could she be found at the Auditorium Theatre where "Lakme" was on the program. She is to have the leading role in "Monna Vanna" tonight.

The change in the management of the company came after rumors had been circulated here for the past few weeks that there was dissatisfaction in the ranks of the singers. Gossip had it that there was a feud on between the Italian singers and the rest of the cast.

Most of the operas sung here this year have been Italian and this is said to have caused resentment among the French and American singers who have contracts with the company. Singers, however, have repeatedly denied that there has been any ill feeling among them.

When Miss Garden returned recently to Chicago she was met at the depot by newspaper reporters and told them that there would be more French operas in the future.

NEW ENGLAND FOX HUNTERS TO GET BUSY

The New England Fox Hunters' Club is about ready for its sixteenth annual mid-winter meet at Milford, Mass., all next week. Headquarters will be at the Mansion House, like last year. The hunt will start at daybreak Monday morning and will continue through the week, ending Saturday afternoon. There will be a big banquet at the Mansion House, Tuesday evening, followed with an old-time fox hunters' reunion, when the "boys" will gather together to swap stories of the hunt. George S. Read, Jr., of Woonsocket, R. I., president of the club, plans to attend the meet, as do many hunters from around Boston.

AGREE TO WORK LONGER HOURS FOR SAME WAGES

Newark, N. J., Jan. 14.—The employes of the Public Service Company, 400 in number, have agreed to work ten hours a day for the same wages they now receive for nine hours, according to William Wepner, chairman of the joint conference board of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America. This action was taken to help the company out of financial difficulties, he said. It is operative for six months.

STOKES OF NEW JERSEY HINTED FOR TREASURY

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 14.—The name of former Governor E. C. Stokes of New Jersey was mentioned here today as a possibility for secretary of the treasury in the Harding cabinet. It was learned today that Stokes has the support of United States Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen, who is a close personal friend of the President-elect. Senator Frelinghuysen said that he had discussed cabinet appointments with Mr. Harding and had recommended Charles Evans Hughes for secretary of State.

TWO HELD FOR BREAK IN STORE AT TAUNTON

LOGAN ELECTED BY 101ST VETS

Selected as Honorary Leader and Lieutenant Blake Being Temporary President

Colonel Edward L. Logan, former regimental commander, was unanimously elected honorary president of the 101st Infantry Regiment Veterans' Association, which was organized at the Y. D. Club.

Lieutenant William J. Blake of Brookline, Harvard, '13, was elected temporary president, with good prospect of having the berth made permanent. Lieutenant Blake is one of the assistant football coaches at Harvard. He is a former commander of Brookline Post No. 11, American Legion, and a member of the Federal Vocational and Educational Training.

Top Sergeant "Larry" Connery of Lynn, member of A Company, president of the McConnell Associates, professional actor and chief entertainer of the regiment overseas, was elected first vice-president. Sergeant George E. Wilson of Roxbury, member of B Company, a veteran of two wars, was elected second vice-president.

Sergeant James E. Maguire of F Company, twice decorated, and commander of the American Legion in Worcester, was elected secretary, and Corporal Rolland Harris of Winchester was made treasurer.

An executive committee was appointed consisting of one man from each company.

City Councillor David Brickley, who presided, announced that election of permanent officers would take place in April. A committee of five was appointed to draft by-laws. This committee is made up of Colonel Logan, Lieutenant John J. Lydon of South Boston, Sergeant Dorrin S. Lyons and Captain John T. Comerford.

Colonel Logan lectured on his recent sojourn over the old battlefields.

President Blake announced today that one of the first matters to be attended to would be perfecting company organizations. Each company is to have its own president and list of officers and thus become an active unit in the Regimental Veterans' Association. Insignia and a regimental history will be reported.

ROXBURY MAN ACCUSED OF SELLING A STILL

Ice Famine Hits Iceland!

London, Jan. 14—For the first time on record there is an ice famine in Iceland. Cablegrams from Reykjavik, the capital, appeal to Norway to rush shipments of ice to Iceland to save the herring harvest from spoiling.

The famine is due to the mild Winter.

U. S. ACTS ON LANGDON DEATH

Davis and Daniels in Protest Conference, Await Japan's Official Statement

Washington, Jan. 14.—The killing of Lieutenant W. H. Langdon of Boston, engineer officer of the United States cruiser Albany, at Vladivostok January 8, which, according to this government's official reports, looks like an assassination, was the subject of a conference between Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Acting Secretary of State Davis with a view to forwarding formal protest to the Japanese government.

The State Department is awaiting further facts, and up to an early hour today also was awaiting some official statement from the Japanese government.

Secretary Daniels has ordered a complete report from Admiral Gleaves when he has investigated the affair personally at Vladivostok, and the State Department has instructed its consul at Vladivostok to make a further and detailed report.

The Japanese embassy has received a dispatch stating that the government and people of Japan were greatly concerned over the incident and that both the minister of war and commandant at Wladivostok had expressed their regret.

Similar attitude on the part of the Japanese government officials has been reported by Admiral Gleaves and the American consul at Vladivostok.

It is a matter of comment here that the Japanese government has been so prompt in this affair and is hurrying up its regrets to all concerned at Vladivostok. It was reported the sentry slayer is being tried by court-martial.

Hub Society Girls Work in Labrador

Are young ladies of Back Bay society life, tiring of social functions, dancing and coming-out parties, motor cars and all that goes to make up a life of ease and luxury?

Are these young women becoming enthused with the spirit of usefulness—a desire to do something worth while—something that would benefit the less fortunate?

These two questions have been answered by Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, the eminent missionary-doctor, whose work among the Labrador fisherfolk during the past thirty years, is known the world over. Dr. Grenfell, in an interview with a representative of the Boston American made the following statement:

SEEKING NEW VISION.

"There are a lot of young women in the Back Bay, endowed with wealth, who are tired of society life, and are seeing a new vision of life in its opportunities of doing good. Boston is full of these women. Many of them are going to break their tether by going to Labrador in my work."

Dr. Grenfell said that during the past few years daughters of some of Boston's leading families have proven their metal in this respect.

"I am very much gratified with the results of their work," said the intrepid physician. "The young ladies have proven that certain talents, allowed to lie dormant as the result of luxurious living, can be diverted to paths of usefulness. These young women have been of inestimable value to me in my work in Newfoundland. They enter into the spirit of the work, and enjoy it.

WONDERFUL APTITUDE.

Dr. Harry L. Paddon, another celebrated surgeon, associated with Dr. Grenfell in his work and in charge of the hospital stations at Indian Harbor and the Northeast River districts corroborates Dr. Grenfell's statements. He says:

"I cannot speak too highly of the work accomplished in the Labrador country by Boston young women. They have shown wonderful aptitude for the work, a willingness to take hold wherever it was necessary, even to a point of 'roughing it,' as sometimes becomes necessary in the North country."

During the past few years exclusive circles of Boston society have contributed to this work many of its younger and prominent members. During the past Summer the Boston contingent included Miss Gertrude Bradlee of Chestnut Hill, Miss Eleanor Baker, Miss Hilda Greenleaf, Miss Ruth Taylor, well known in Cohasset Summer society life; Miss Ruth Foster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Foster of the Fenway, and Miss J. F. Peabody, a member of one of Boston's prominent families.

These young ladies did admirable work in the hospital at St. Anthony, according to Miss E. E. White, New England secretary of the Grenfell Association.

AS HOSPITAL AIDS.

"Boston has surely assisted in this wonderful work, both in a monetary way and in service," said Miss White. "Their work as aids in the hospital at St. Anthony will stand as a monument to their memory."

Many instances were cited by Dr. Paddon of the splendid work accomplished by these young women, their enthusiasm and their interest in improving the conditions of the fisherfolk along the Labrador coast.

"I know of a daughter of one prominent Boston family who worked with me at the Indian Harbor station," said Dr. Paddon. "So interested was she in her work that she sent for her sister to join her, and later I received a letter from the mother, offering her services in any capacity, even to assisting in the care of children in our orphanage."

BROUGHT BOY BACK.

Another instance cited by Dr. Paddon was of a Boston young woman who went to Labrador for the Summer to assist in the work. She became interested in the educational development of the children to such an extent that she returned to Boston and personally raised $1,000 to educate a Labrador boy, whom she later brought to Boston for this purpose.

"This is only one of many instances I could tell, if time would permit," continued Dr. Paddon.

Another incident of interest was told of one of Boston's well-known graduate nurses, Miss Ruth Robinson, whose work in the surgical ward at the St. Anthony Hospital has been highly commended.

In her work Miss Robinson had found a boy, between nine and ten years old, with hardly the strength of an infant. It was found necessary to provide special treatment for the boy.

"Miss Robinson carried that boy in her arms all the way from Labrador to Pittsfield, Mass., traveling alone on the train," said Miss White. "It is a long journey for a young woman to take, but Miss Robinson braved it, and brought the little fellow down here, unassisted.

ABLE TO WALK.

"On Christmas Day last, Dr. Grenfell visited the boy at the children's hospital in Pittsfield, and found that he was able to walk. This is an example of what Boston young women are doing and in a field where help and money to carry on this work are needed."

Commendable work of the young men in Labrador has been mentioned, several graduate physicians having spent a considerable time in the North country with Dr. Grenfell, making medical trips in the schooner Strathcona. This, according to Dr. Grenfell, is an experience in the medical profession that is really worth while.

Dr Grenfell's visit to Boston has been devoted to the campaign of soliciting endowment funds necessary to perpetuate the work of his hospitals and orphanages along the Labrador coast.

AMERICANS IN JAPAN OPPOSED TO VANDERLIP

Tokio, Jan. 14.—Strong opposition has arisen in the American colony here over the possible appointment of Frank Vanderlip as ambassador to Japan. The Japanese themselves are extremely favorable to his appointment because of his friendliness to this country as expressed by him when he visited here some months ago.

'LOST' AIRMEN BACK HOME

Small, but Enthusiastic Crowd Greets Special as It Rolls Into New York

By International News Service.

New York, Jan. 14—The three "lost" American balloonists came home today. They arrived in a special train from Buffalo, N. Y., at 10:26 o'clock this morning. Though a drizzling rain had turned the snow into slush and a mist hung over the city, a good sized crowd waited in the street to greet the trio.

As they alighted from their train, Lieutenants Kloor, Farrell and Hinton were welcomed by some 300 persons, including many women. Among these were city officials who had come in an informal capacity, many naval officers and relatives and friends.

Mrs. Stephen Farrell and Mrs. Walter Hinton were at the station nearly an hour before the train arrived, both bubbling over with joy. Tears glistened in many eyes when the two lieutenants, who had come back literally from the shadow of death in the frozen wilds of the Northland, leaped from the train the moment it stopped and embraced and kissed their wives.

As the three lieutenants accompanied by the men and women who had welcomed them passed through the main hall of Pennsylvania Station, the six hundred odd persons scattered there quickly grasped their identity and there were many hearty cheers and impromptu handshakes.

From the moment the train pulled in until the three naval men and the escorting group disappeared in the Pennsylvania Hotel across the street from the station, there was a steady click of a dozen cameras while a small army of newspaper men surrounding the trio fired endless volleys of questions at them.

A ruse by the three aeronauts to evade the crowd that thronged the station proper by taking a subway passage to the hotel failed, for fully 500 persons rushed after them, cheering, calling the names of the three lieutenants over and over, and insisting on patting them on the backs and shaking hands.

Miss Alexandra Flowerton, Lieutenant Kloor's sweetheart, also was at the station. She and the wives of Lieutenants Hinton and Farrell were repeatedly in danger of being crushed by the crowd.

So dangerous did the rush become at one time that photographers and newspapermen formed a human barricade between the three and the crowd, holding the throng back with arms, sticks and camera stands.

TAXPAYERS' STRIKE ADDS TO TROUBLES IN VIENNA

Berlin, Jan. 14.—A taxpayers' strike has begun in many of the largest factories in Vienna, according to dispatches reaching Berlin. It is feared by the government that the strike may become general, making still worse the already practically bankrupt finances of Austria.

The workingman inaugurated the strike against the tax collector to enforce a demand of 60,000 crowns exemption. The municipal employes in Vienna presented new wage demands asking a minimum wage increase of $2,000 crowns per year.

ORGANIZE RELIEF BODY FOR HAVERHILL'S NEEDY

Haverhill, Jan. 14.—An organized campaign to provide relief for several thousand needy families here resulting from a business depression of seven months has been started, with every welfare organization, all churches, fraternal and social organizations participating.

A general committee composed of representatives of these organization, the Mayor and aldermen with Rev. H. William Hook, pastor of the Grace M. E. Church, as chairman, is in general charge. A clearing house centre through which all funds and donations will pass will be established.

HAD $100, LENT $10 AND $90 WAS STOLEN

Frederick Smith, thirty-eight years old, of Baxter street, South Boston, was arraigned today charged with larceny of $90 from Owen Rogers, seventy-five years old, of Seventh street. He was sentenced to serve one month in the House of Correction and appealed. Rogers testified that, after drawing $100 from the bank, he met Smith, who borrowed ten dollars. Smith then took him to a saloon and bought him several drinks of moonshine with the money that he had borrowed, Rogers said.

COAL GAS OVERCOMES FIVE IN FALL RIVER

Fall River, Jan. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Almeida, the former a well-known soccer player, and their three small children had a narrow escape from suffocation from coal gas fumes at their home on Raymond street. The five members of this family were found in an unconscious condition by neighbors.

ESCAPED PLYMOUTH PRISONER RETAKEN

Brockton, Jan. 14.—Elmore Blair of this city, who escaped from the county jail at Plymouth Wednesday, is now back at Plymouth, having been apprehended near Mayflower Grove while on board a trolley car bound from Whitman.

Canton's War Saving Stamp Business Big

John J. Haverty, postmaster at Canton, reported to the First Federal Reserve District that he has disposed of all the War Saving Stamps allotted to him, and in addition has sold 7,000 Thrift Stamps and six $100 Treasury Savings Certificates. He sold 3,000 War Savings Stamps, making the value of his total sales $12,350.

DOCTORS JOIN A. A. R. I. R.

Meet at City Club Tonight to Form Medical and Dental Council

Doctors and dentists from all over Greater Boston will meet in the City Club at 8 o'clock tonight to form a council to be known as the Medical and Dental Council of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic. Mayor Morgan of Thurles will speak.

The committee in charge of the meeting is composed of Francis P. McCarthy, M. D.; Peter J. Fleming, M. D.; George A. Sullivan D. D. S., and Frederick A. Keyes, D. D. S.

In their circular sent to colleagues in Greater Boston the medical and dental men point out that they should be organized in a position to lend their assistance to Ireland, which is so sorely needed at the present time.

Several other meetings will take place tonight under auspices of the A. A. R. I. R. In Sarah Greenwood School Hall, Glenway street, Dorchester, with William H. O'Brien of the Public Service Commission and John Morton as speakers. In Ozanam Hall, Cambridge, the William Orr Council will hold a mass meeting with Rev. Dr. Albert W. Allen of Brooklyn, N. Y., an Episcopalian minister, as speaker.

There will be a mass meeting in Brookline tonight under auspices of the Commander Jack Barry Council, in St. Mary's School Hall. Professor Daniel Foley and Mrs. Frank C. Scanlan of Milton will be the speakers.

Another mass meeting tonight will be that held in K. of C. Hall, Arlington Centre, where James T. Hayes of Charlestown and Martin Hunt of Holy Cross College and Washington, D. C., will speak.

Rats Spread Disease Through Randolph

Randolph, Jan. 14.—This town is stirred by an epidemic of jaundice, said to have been spread by rats. Nearly fifty cases have come to light and the local physicians have called in experts from Harvard College to try to stay its spread.

The majority of the cases have been among the young people of the town. Dr. George V. Higgins believes that the epidemic has subsided to a marked degree.

A number of rats have been dissected by Harvard medical authorities and they are of the opinion that the animals have spread the disease. There has been a vigorous campaign waged against them in all sections of the town.

BOSTON WAR NURSE DIES IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Jan. 14.—Miss Mildred Hope Forbes, a former nurse who achieved a brilliant record in the World War, is dead at the Montreal General Hospital. Miss Forbs, who trained in Boston and Montreal, went overseas at the outbreak of the war as a member of the Canadian Army Medical Corps. She served in Egypt, the Isle of Lemnos and Salonica, and was later assistant chief matron of the Canadian Corps in London. King George decorated her with the medal of the Royal Red Cross.

TO ENROLL WORCESTER VOTERS EVERY WEEK

Worcester, Jan. 14.—As the result of a suggestion of Mayor Peter F. Sullivan in his inaugural message the registrars of voters starting Wednesday will hold weekly sessions every Wednesday in City Hall from 2 to 4 and from 7 to 9 p. m. If it appears necessary to the convenience of the public other hours will be made. Later in the year the usual office hours will be kept.

BRITAIN PLANS PACIFIC BASE

Encourages U. S. Disarmament Talk While Scheming to Transfer Fleet

London, Jan. 14.—While encouragement is given here to American disarmament talk, the British experts are devising plans which are intended to give the imperial navy predominance on the Pacific Ocean.

The Sydney (Australia) Sun has revealed the scheme, which includes the building of new naval bases in the Pacific capable of accommodating the biggest fighting units and permitting England to transfer a large proportion of its naval forces to those waters.

The revelation is confirmed in London with additional information of the development of Cockburn Sound and Hohenloh, in New Britain, for naval purposes being considered.

Another proposal is that the British government should pay for the expansion of the docks at Fremantle, in western Australia, to provide accommodation for battle fleet units.

The whole question of British predominance in the Pacific has been raised by Australians, who say they want to make their country secure against invasion in the event of conflict with the Japanese. No decision will be reached until the committee on naval construction, now meeting here, reports to the imperial conference at the meeting in London in June.

The Australian delegates expect to convince the conference that the Pacific Ocean is likely to be the scene of the next great naval conflict.

Here's a Way to Insure Your Child's Health

Now what's the use of having a beautiful new toy engine, with wheels and smokestack and a nice long train, when you don't know how to make it run?

What, again, is the use of having fine, efficient hospitals, and child health dentists, and happy, wholesome day nurseries, if nobody knows about them and nobody sends little sons and daughters to benefit?

These are the questions asked by the Health Education Committee, and its chairman, Dr. Mary R. Lakeman, Assistant Director of the Division of Hygiene, of the State Department of Health, who is helping the City Federation with their Children's Health Week.

So Dr. Lakeman stresses, with kindly emphasis, the great necessity of little Isadore's mother knowing where she can take that dear child, to get out his pesky tonsils, so that young Isadore will grow up and go to college some day, bright and useful and beautiful, instead of growing up to be a misfit in some poorly managed overall factory. Here's what Dr. Lakeman says:

GOOD FOR ISADORE.

"At Paul Revere Hall, where the Health Education Committee of the City Federation's Health Week, hopes to show the mother of young Isadore quite a lot of things, we're going to have health exhibits. Now, first, we're going to have a kindergarten at Y. W. C. A. headquarters, next door, with a nice trained nurse and kindergarten music. Little Isadore's mother may leave him, while she goes to find out more about his health. Let no mother stay away, because the baby is too heavy to carry around.

"So, Mrs. Mother, as soon as you get up the stairs to Paul Revere Hall, you will find the first room.

"There Dr. Mary Putnam, pediatrician, will examine children. So bring your Mary and your Flossie and your Archie with the long yellow curls, and just hand those darlings over to Dr. Putnam, who will weigh them and measure them, and look at their teeth and tonsils and tell you how healthy the blessed lambs are, and what you must do to make them healthier still.

"For instance, Dr. Putnam, at Paul Revere Hall, in the first room of the health exhibits, during the health week of February 6 to 12, may pass you back your adorable Isabelle and may say to you, 'A fine child, madam, Isabelle is started on the way which will never bring her parents' gray hairs down in sorrow to the grave, only, dear lady, did you never think of having the fine, white, really beautiful teeth of remarkable young Isabelle regulated?'

TO IMPROVE ISABELLE.

"You, parent of darling Isabelle, will hesitate. And Dr. Putnam will come to the rescue. 'Now don't fret, madam,' she will say. 'Just talk to one of our good health nurses in the next room. She will look you up a dentist or a clinic and will help you to the right place.

"Then you will take young Isabelle into the next room, and she will be helped along the rocky road to teeth regulation. And, after you have found out for yourself, you will tell your neighbors, for you won't be selfish with the good message. And other little Isabelles will benefit, because yours has benefited in the first place.

Let no mother stay away because the baby is too heavy to carry around....

"So the information will be spread, all to the end that the next generation of young Miss and Master America, will be healthier, brighter, more beautiful, than the last. For, in Boston, we have the dentists, we have the clinics, we have the public health doctors, we have the public health nurses, we have the facilities. All we need is young Doris and Jehoshaphet. Bring them along, mammas adoring! For the best is none too good for your children. Boston, and Boston's clubwmen, expect every mother to do her duty, in the way of better health for the generation now growing up all about us."

DRIVER ARRESTED AFTER TRUCK RUNS OVER BOY

Frederick J. Wilkins, Jr., four and one-half years old, of No. 10 Roger street, South Boston, was run over and dangerously injured on Dorchester avenue by a light motor truck driven by Joseph Rugo, Jr., of No. 172 Magnolia street, Dorchester. Rugo was arrested on a technical charge of assault and battery, which the police say will be changed to manslaughter if the child dies.

MILK CUT TO 16 CENTS PER QUART IN BROCKTON

Brockton, Jan. 14. — Two of the leading milk distributors of this city—the F. F. Field Dutchland Farm and the Producers' Dairy Company—who handle a large portion of the milk distributed in Brockton, announced a reduction in the retail price of milk to take effect on February 1. Milk by the quart will be reduced from 17 to 16 cents and milk by the eight-quart can will be reduced ten cents.

HOTEL MEN GUESTS AT ORIENTAL DINNER

Garbed in Chinese yeshons and Japanese kimonos, 300 hotel owners and managers from all over Massachusetts attended an Oriental dinner at the Hotel Somerset. The affair was under the auspices of the Massachusetts Hotel Association. Decorations, food and entertainment were all Oriental in flavor and appearance. Even the music was Chinese and played by Chinese. W. R. Robinson of Kansas City, president of the American Hotel Association; Arthur L. Race, president of the New England Hotel Association, were among the guests of honor.

JAIL OR WEDDING BELLS FOR HEIR

Kansas City Judge to Decide If New Haven's "Millionaire Kid" Has "Come Back"

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 14.—With love, marriage and a fortune balanced in the scales of justice against imprisonment and dishonor, Louis Osterweiss, twenty-four year-old "millionaire kid" today was awaiting the decision of Federal Judge John C. Pollock on his efforts to "beat back" from the 'gold curse" in the year of probation allowed him last January.

If the court decides he has "come back" Osterwiess will marry a San Antonio, Texas, girl and will be free to use the fortune left him by his father at New Haven, Ct. If the judge decides he has failed the "Kid" faces a sentence to Fort Leavenworth for a crime committed there while serving time for deserting a National Guard unit.

Telling of his experiences in the year of probation he declared he had "ridden the rods" from Houston, Texas, to New Haven, Ct., and in his "private car" from Chicago to San Francisco. "I've spent $200,000 of that gold stuff," he said with a laugh. "That was my curse—the gold curse I'm cured now. I've been hard at work."

The "millionaire kid," so called because of his extravagant mode of life while a prisoner at Fort Leavenworth, where he spent $50 a week on ice cream sundaes, said he longed to return to Broadway.

"I know 200 chorus girls on Broadway," he said. "Gee, I'd like to see them."

Osterwiess' fortune is held by court order in New Haven Union Trust Company, New Haven, Ct.

"They can keep the money," he said in parting. "I want my girl, for I've 'come back.'"

7 ARRESTED IN NEW YORK ANTI-RUM CRUSADE

New York, Jan. 14.—Seven persons were arrested here by internal revenue agents in their campaign to check the illicit traffic of liquor in this city. The men were charged with attempting to unlawfully transport 1,000 cases of liquor from Brooklyn warehouses to Manhattan. Two of the men arrested are inspectors of the State prohibition directors' office. They are charged with accepting $100 bribes.

INDICT ALLEGED POLICE GRAFTER

First Gun Fired in Ex-Governor Whitman's Probe of New York Department

New York, Jan. 14.—The opening gun was fired in ex-Governor Charles S. Whitman's inquiry into alleged police graft in New York city when an indictment was handed up by the grand jury against Police Captain William A. Bailey of the East Thirtieth street station.

Revelations that may equal in their sensational nature those that followed the Rosenthal murder were foreshadowed. Five police precincts are already involved in the inquiry. Relations alleged to exist between police grafters and private detective agencies will form the subject for a particularly searching investigation, it was predicted. The private sleuthing field has become exceedingly lucrative of late and many former police officials are now connected with such agencies.

FREE IRELAND NO MENACE TO BRITAIN, SAYS HARRIGAN

Loyalty to Erin is the keynote to Irish character, says John F. Harrigan of Worcester, State president of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic in the fourth of his series of articles on the Irish problem, printed today in the Boston American. He denies the British contention that Ireland, free, would be a constant menace to England, and cites the history of the long centuries when Ireland was the world's leader in learning, to substantiate his claim that "the most distressful land" never sought to filch territory from a neighbor.

LONG THOUGHTS AND STRONG THOUGHTS THAT ARE UPPERMOST IN THE MINDS OF IRISH PEOPLE WITH REGARD TO IRELAND.

By JOHN F. HARRIGAN.

What centuries of sorrow and of hope are embodied in two lines of Irish song! One of the lines runs like silver sorrow through pages of Irish ballads and the other like a thread of golden hope.

JOHN F. HARRIGAN.

The one is: "And how is poor old Ireland, and how does she stand?" And the other, oft repeated through the centuries, hopefully says, "'Tis morn upon the hills of Inisfail." These two lines have never fallen from the lips and hearts of the Irish people, whether at home or abroad. With their hands steady upon the work of everyday life, wherever they had to live, the Irish race served well in the various vocations and avocations, going forth as driven exiles, yet arising to eminence in affairs of State and in the duties of common, everyday life. "They are the greatest people in the world," said the English G. K. Chesterton the other day, "at the two hardest trades in the world, the trade of the soldier and the trade of the lawyer." Many a blow they struck in the field and in the Legislatures for the rights of peoples among whom they dwelt.

Even in England in 1905, when the rights of private schools were to be infringed upon, the Irish Parliamentarians, with the prospect of Home rule every year, abandoned the Liberal party, went over on the side of the Tories and saved the rights of private schools in England, though the question did not concern the Irish private schools. They lost the chance of Home Rule.

Yet in all their activities, whether in Ireland or abroad, the Irish have never allowed their thoughts to waver in their constant love for their beloved motherland. The history of various "movements" that tended to alleviate the "distressful country" give ample witness to the longing the race for the liberty of their dear country.

Many Donations, Big and Small

Count the "donations," big and small, that went from the four quarters of the globe to the poor cabins of the people and to the statesmen who endeavored to win some redress from the unwilling imperialist. It is not braggadocchio to say that the annual observance of St. Patrick's Day is, excepting the feasts of the Church, the one international celebration in the world, and simple though its exercises were in many a little hamlet, the annual "program" kept alive the memory of Erin, and, as popular verse put it, "The whole world is Irish on St. Patrick's Day."

Again, take the dying sigh of Sarsfield, as his blood poured out on the field of Flanders, "Would that this blood were shed for Ireland." And, again, the dying wish of a later soldier, William Butler, "Give me six feet of earth in Irish ground." These are the constant thoughts of Irishmen the world over.

The spirit that vivified the Irish race during those past centuries is the undimmed heritage of the Irish and their descendants today. The freedom of Ireland—that is the thought uppermost in their minds today. Nothing less. It is useless to conjecture whether they would be content with a broad form of Home Rule.

Complete Freedom Wanted in Ireland

In Ireland they want complete freedom from foreign domination. Sinn Fein: that is the determined resolve of over 80 per cent. of the Irish people at home. And it is the identical determination of their race and their sympathizers in all the corners of the world.

The man of the street here in America will tell you, with no mincing of words, "I hope De Valera will stand firm for the demands of his people; no half-way measures, nothing but complete separation from England." There are too many broken treaties already upon record, too many broken and ruined treaty stones to cry out against parley with English promises.

"There will be no peace in the world, till Ireland gets her liberty," the Irish envoys are calmly telling us, and whether we like to believe it or not, there is a fact, and nobody needs a special gift of prophecy to accept the statement.

Today, therefore, the great thought uppermost in the minds of the Irish people is the freedom of their country. There is no thought about revenge upon the hereditary enemy, when that goal shall have been obtained. Even the leaders of the Irish movement are willing to offer the most assuring pledges, fortifying them by the most effective sanctions, that the new position of Ireland as a free nation shall be no military menace to England. The United States will be invited to supervise these solemn pledges of the Irish government.

No Ambition to Acquire Territory

Secondly, Ireland has no ambition to acquire territorial aggrandizement out of her new status. And that is worthy of note; for in the new alignment of state brought about by the issues of the late war, not the rough-and-tumble scramble made by every one of the new states against the territory of their neighbors.

Ireland was once the intellectual guide of the world; for three centuries her apostles and her scholars brought the light of learning not only to England but all through Europe even as far as the Danube. Yet not in any single instance of this forward march of her educators did Ireland ever try to get a single foot of foreign territory.

When Athens was the educator of the world, she also became "mistress of the seas" and crushed her commercial rival in Asia Minor. And England has done that Athenian program over and over again in the modern world. Under pretense of religion or learning, she planted her armies and her business agents wherever her missionaries went. "Take up the white man's burden," was the pose of her poet's hypocritical song.

See the turn that line took when England came to celebrate the Queen's jubilee twenty years ago. Upon her postage stamps she wrote this line—a line, by the way, which in prospect brought ruin upon Germany: "We hold a larger empire than has been." There was England's boast after her years of "missionary" enterprise.

Erin Never Exacted Tax for Contributions

Ireland alone of all the nations of the world took no foreign territory during her centuries of intellectual supremacy. Though she left "Irish streets" in many great centres—the Irish streets in Oxford, the Rue des Irlandais in Paris, the Schotenkloster in Vienna—yet she never tried to impose her language upon the natives, nor did she ever exact a tax for her contributions to the intellectual and civic growth of the other peoples. And in the light of that wonderful testimony of history, we read what Ireland will do in her new era.

She will, attaining her own self-determination, teach other nations to obtain and hold their self-determination. Her exiled children and their descendants have manifested that spirit always. Here in the United States they are Americans first; and because they are Americans they will insist that the land of their forefathers be accorded the full measure of sympathy and co-operation which America and American principles have asserted in regard to other peoples. To recognize England's unjust tenure of Ireland is un-American.

The Irish people by almost unanimous vote have established their form of government; it is American to recognize that Irish republic, and to do so at once and effectively. That is what is uppermost in the minds of Irish people today, and in the minds of all true Americans. The Irish envoys have sought our co-operation openly and candidly; their embassy never yet stooped to a deceit which characterizes the recent embassy of Balfour, holding as he did secret treaties in one hand, as he proffered the other hand to beg for American support against Germany. American school histories shall yet put that Balfour scene alongside of a page about Benedict Arnold.

Porker Trails Game Like Trained Dog

Natchez, Miss., Jan. 14.—"Devil Hog," a porker belonging to Tucker Gibson, wealthy hunter and planter of Tensas parish, La., was adopted early in life by a setter "mother" and developed after a few months the scent of a bird dog.

He was trained with the same care as any one of the dogs in Tucker's kennels and developed such proficiency that his owner has entered him in field trials to be pulled off here the latter part part of this month.

The hunting proclivities of the hog were discovered by accident when he followed the puppies with whom he was raised and in their training the porker made perfect flushes with never a break.

BANS SUNDAY HOCKEY GAMES IN WORCESTER

Worcester, Jan. 14.—Permits for Sunday hockey games on Worcester skating ponds will not be issued hereafter by Thomas Holland, executive officer of the Parks and Recreation Commission. He says there are so many skaters out Sundays it does not seem fair to assign large spaces for hockey games.

MAKES VOTING BOOTHS TROLLEY CAR STATIONS

Worcester, Jan. 14.—Mayor Peter F. Sullivan today instructed Superintendent of Public Buildings George C. Halcott at once to open the voting booths on Worcester Common as shelters for people waiting for trolleys. Fires will be lighted in the booths and electrical connections made so they will be lighted at night.

WOMEN'S PARTY TO CONFER

Bay State Leaders Will Meet Tuesday to Plan for National Convention

Previous to the convention of the National Woman's party in Washington, February 15 to 19, the State executive committee is inviting members and friends to a pre-convention conference at the residence of Mrs Stephen Chase, No. 88 Chestnut street, on Tuesday next at 3 o'clock. Delegates to the national convention will be elected.

It being the desire of the committee that the delegates shall have a general idea of the opinions of the members relative to a continuation of the organization the subject under discussion will be: "Shall the National Woman's Party Continue, and if so to What End?"

Mrs. Josephine Peabody Marks, member of the national advisory council; Mrs. Eugene R. Shippen charter member of the organization and former chairman of the Detroit branch, and Miss Mabel Gillespie, secretary of the Women's Trade Union League, will speak, followed by leading members of the Massachusetts group. Mrs. Agnes H. Morey of Brookline, State chairman, will preside.

Mrs. Morey, who is one of the leaders of the national group, will make the recommendation of the national committee of State chairmen, relative to "the continuation and progress of the National Woman's party, to the convention in Washington in February.

WORCESTER WOMEN TO EXPLAIN ECONOMICS

Worcester, Jan. 14.—One thousand pet economies will be demonstrated at a thrift exhibit the week of February 14 in the Worcester Woman's Clubhouse. Every member of the club has been asked to explain her pet economy. Woman throughout the city are eager to hear of the methods of buying or household management that have saved time and money for the club members.

Coughs and Colds

Do You Get Coffee-joy Like This?

You can! Have you ever tried La Touraine, "The Coffee of Good Taste"? If not, there's a coffee tang and aroma—an appetizing richness of flavor waiting for you that is so good it stands by itself. Those who have once known this real coffee-taste are never contented with less.

Millions know it

Millions enjoy the supreme pleasure of La Touraine. Many who would pay any price for coffee, prefer La Touraine because it has a flavor that can be had in no other coffee.

Different* from other coffee

Users of La Touraine declare that it is "different" from any other coffee because it's so rich, so full of coffee-goodness. But La Touraine is just coffee—honest coffee produced with all the skill and care that can be lavished on coffee by life-long coffee experts, because all La Touraine conforms to the famous La Touraine Formula.

What is the La Touraine Formula?

The La Touraine Formula is a coffee ideal—the guiding principle of this famous Boston coffee house. Under it the finest coffees are chosen from the world's great markets. These coffees, selected by type and kind, are carefully examined for perfection of bean. They are then blended scientifically to bring out the delicious properties of each, and roasted by experienced roast-masters to just the fine shade and aroma that "cooks them to a turn." The La Touraine Formula is the secret of "The Coffee of Good Taste."

Insist on the La Touraine Package

Do not accept La Touraine unless it is in the La Touraine package. Buy it in the package marked "bean" and have your grocer grind it fresh for you. You will then get the utmost flavor in your cup.

Mr. Quinby Asks You to Try This Coffee Test

I have spent the greater part of twenty years trying to produce the finest possible cup of coffee. La Touraine, produced according to the La Touraine Formula, is the result, which thousands of experiments have failed to improve upon. My reward for all this effort is that nearly everyone who tries La Touraine the first time, continues to use it. So, my problem is simply to get more people to try La Touraine once. La Touraine itself will do the rest. I ask you to make this test: get a package of La Touraine and serve it to your family. Don't tell them what brand it is. If they do not think it is the finest coffee they ever tasted, return the unused coffee to your grocer and he will refund your money for the full pound. Also ask your grocer for our booklet: "How I Make Perfect Coffee," or if he can't supply you write to us direct. Follow the rules and thereby get 100% flavor and coffee-satisfaction.

BOSTON POLICE FORCE SECOND TO NONE, SAY OFFICIALS

New York may be all puffed up over the praises sung by Health Commissioner Copeland, who claims "it is the best policed and the best governed city in the world," but such fervent eulogy doesn't make Boston wince a bit.

Boston, in the opinion of officials and citizens interviewed, doesn't have to be jealous and isn't. Defenders of the Hub say it doesn't have to take off its hat or play second fiddle to New York or any other city.

They concede that Manhattan may be "larger and noisier," but they don't consider that it excels Boston in civic pride or traditions, or that its police force is any braver or better disciplined, or that its city government is any more efficient.

"The New York police department, under Commissioner Enwright, has proved more alert, more active, more efficient than any other police organization in America or Europe. I have travelled and observed and I know the facts."

TRIBUTE BY CURTIS.

Police Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis of Boston was too considerate and polite to challenge Health Commissioner Copeland. He was too neighborly to express the slightest resentment or criticism and too modest to brag about the Boston police department, but he and Superintendent Michael H. Crowley could not conceal their pride in the newly-constructed force.

Police Commissioner Curtis doesn't boast. That was why he balked at comparisons. He prefers actions and results to words. But the subject broached, Commissioner Curtis was glad to pay tribute to Boston's police department. He patted the new force encouragingly on the back and was warm in his appreciation of the efforts and morale of the department. He indorses Adjutant-General Stevens' plan for a mobile state force to round up auto bandits. Said he:

"Many of the men are very young and some of them are still relatively inexperienced, but nobody can say they are lacking in spirit and courage. The rank and file take their jobs seriously and steady improvement is shown as a result. One thing that can be said about our new and younger policemen is that as a class they possess a higher standard of intelligence than the former members.

EIGHTY PER CENT. VETERANS.

"In my report to Governor Coolidge for the year ending November 30, 1920, I called attention to the fact that 75 per cent. of the new members were World War veterans. Thirty odd new men were put on the force recently and everyone is a veteran, and a hundred or more others will soon be added, bringing the total of veterans among the new members to about 80 per cent.

"In the recent crusade, Superintendent Crowley had upward of 300 of the younger policemen scattered throughout the city in civilian clothes. Some of them pulled caps down over their eyes and were pretty well disguised in rough looking clothes. They rounded up close to 600 suspicious persons in a few weeks."

Superintendent Crowley remarked here that Captain Hoppe of the Traffic Squad had reported an automobile missing as a test and had purposely sent it through certain down town streets to see if the patrolmen were alert and that it was detected and held up by a policeman within fifteen minutes.

Commissioner Curtis here referred to the preface of his annual report to Governor Coolidge which read in part:

"My efforts during the period mentioned, and those of the superior officers, have been largely confined to perfecting the new organization made necessary by the events of September, 1919. From the ninth day of that month to November 30, 1920, there have been appointed 1570 patrolmen, of whom approximately 75 per cent. are veterans and there have also been changes in the personnel to the number of 327, of whom 178 have voluntarily resigned."

Then in the preface to his report Commissioner Curtis called attention to something that is very near to his heart, improved facilities and accommodations for the men, saying:

LACK ACCOMMODATIONS.

"Section 8 of Chapter 291 of the Acts of 1906 provides in part as follows: 'The city of Boston shall provide all such accommodations for the police of said city as said police commissioner may require.' In April, 1919, I submitted to the Mayor of Boston, an exhaustive report on the Boston station houses, pointing out the deficiencies and the lack of necessary accommodations for the police force.

"I then and since have respectfully advised and recommended to the authorities of the city of Boston that they take appropriate action to make adequate provisions. Although my recommendations and requirements were not only reasonable, but imperatively necessary, no one of them has been in any way adopted or met. The police department of the city of Boston today needs new station houses and substantial additions and changes in others."

Mayor Peters said:

"We don't care to boast too much, but we feel that Boston does not have to take second place to any city in the country when it comes to efficiency in government and in the department and pride of its citizens at large."

ALLEGED GERMAN PACT WITH CASEMENT PRINTED

Berlin, Jan. 14.—The text of an alleged agreement entered into by the German foreign office and Sir Roger Casement in 1914 by which Irish assistance was to be given to Germany was printed by the Communist newspaper Freiheit today.

The German government undertook to form a brigade composed of Irish prisoners of war in German internment camps. The Irish brigade "after German victory" was to attempt to force a landing on the Irish coast. Failing in this the Irish were to make a land attack upon the Suez canal defences in Egypt. The plan proved a failure. Up to August, 1915, only fifty-four men had enlisted in the Irish brigade, the document showed.

PORTO RICANS DEMAND NATIVE FOR GOVERNOR

Marion, O., Jan. 14.—Appointment of a native Porto Rican as governor of the island was urged upon President-elect Harding by Felix Cordova Davila, resident commissioner of Porto Rico in Washington, and Antonio R. Barcelo, president of the Porto Rican Senate. They suggested for Mr. Harding's consideration Martin Dreo, former acting governor and now secretary of state.

Census of 1790 Saved by Portsmouth Men

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 14.—The Federal government has reason to be thankful for the forethought of Arthur H. Locke of this city, a former draftsman in Washington, and the late United States Senator J. H. Gallinger of Concord, that at least the census records of 1790 are saved to posterity, notwithstanding the recent fire in Washington, when all records filed there were lost.

Mr. Locke spent many months consulting these records and finding the first great census of 1790 in a dilapidated condition, written on any old paper, in fact old wall paper in some cases, asked and received verbal permission from the Secretary of the Interior to print this at his own expense.

In looking up the law, however, it was found Congress alone could authorize publication.

Mr. Locke then took the matter up with Senator Gallinger, who saw that a bill covering this item was introduced, and a few years later the printed census of 1790 was available at cost to any library in the country.

PORTSMOUTH WOMAN IS CITY TREASURER

WRITES NOTE, KILLS BRIDE

Rochester, N. Y., Husband Stabs Himself to Death After Love Quarrel

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 14.—After carefully writing out on foolscap paper an account of his grievances against his wife, Chris Ulen, forty-five years old, fatally wounded her by slashing her throat with a pen knife here and then killed himself with the same weapon.

Ulen married Mrs. Helen Webber, thirty-eight years old, last October. Yesterday he discovered her in company of a former sweetheart. When he upbraided her she told him that she would see the man whenever she chose.

Ulen returned home and carefully wrote out an account of his grievances. He then awaited his wife's return.

When Mrs. Ulen returned she went to the basement for a can of fruit. Ulen followed her and, creeping up behind the unsuspecting woman, he plunged the penknife into her throat. She fell to the floor and bled to death in a few minutes. Mrs. Ulen's mother was in an adjoining room at the time.

While a girl in the flat above was telephoning for the police, Ulen calmly slashed his own throat with the bloody knife. He was rushed to the General Hospital, but died a few minutes after reaching there.

POLICE WAR ON METERLESS CABS

Begin Active Campaign Against Unauthorized Taxicab Chauffeurs

"MOTOR CAB—MOTOR CARRIAGE," brother.

May sound aristocratic, but police want cab drivers operating without metres to shout this way in the future.

In police parlance these men are termed "night-hawks" or "skinners." "They've got to resort to the use of the public stands provided, and keep away from Back Bay and other depots, and stop crying "taxi.""

Complaints poured into headquarters and a campaign has been launched.

"Taxi" callers, meeting early morning trains at forbidden points, who hustle passengers, bag and all, into their autos, charge the regular fare, and rush them homeward, "will be arrested."

Sergeant John C. Murphy of headquarters hustled two youths into court on minor charges.

Dick McKenna, Grant street, Dorchester, appeared for soliciting passengers at the Back Bay depot, not a public stand, on December 31; trespassing on railroad premises and not wearing his number license on his collar or coat. Judge Burke imposed a fine of $5 on each count.

Black & White Taxi Cabs

New Taximeter Protects the Public

The driver gives the passenger a printed receipt at the end of every trip. This receipt shows the total of fare and extras. Pay only the amount printed on the receipt. In case of dispute pay the driver and mail the receipt to the company for adjustment.

Patrons are urged to demand the receipt at the end of every trip, thus protecting the passenger, the company and the driver.

CANDY PRICES SLASHED

Makers Claim Drop in Sugar and Increase in Sales Enable Them to Be Generous

New York, Jan. 14.—While advertising columns here today broke out in a speckled rash of announcements concerning an astonished drop in prices of bon-bons, brittle, glace fruit and chewing candy, the president of one of the most famous sweets manufactories in the country told what it is all about:

"With sales increasing by about 50 per cent. a month, we are finding it possible to follow the general downward trend of prices.

"Butter, eggs and sugar are down, but labor wage remains stationary. And while this is the condition we cannot materially reduce the figure on hand-made articles while the quality continues the best."

However, another firm declared 33 1-3 per cent. off everything it sells, and indicated that the new rates will be permanent.

It is estimated that approximately 12,000,000 pounds of candy were sold here last month by seven of the largest manufactories. The number would be about doubled by various smaller dealers, making nearly 110,000 pounds daily.

This, it was said today, is an increase of about 25 per cent. over the amount sold six months ago.

The candy-maker, responsible for some of the figures, went on:

"The ban on liquor has brought candy to the attention of the public, educating people up to the real uses and purposes of sweets.

"I do not think that those deprived of their customary alcoholic stimulation are eating the increased thousands of pounds now selling. I don't believe they could, for while sugar contains some of the stimulative qualities of alcohol, it also is a food, and such vast overloading of stomachs is unbelievable."

He said that some of the new uses for candy developing from the unsought publicity conferred by the decline of John Barleycorn are these:

As a tonic on physicians' orders.

As business luncheon by men too occupied to visit restaurants.

As formal desserts instead of indigestible parties.

As bracer against wintry cold by those understanding its fuel value.

The highest paid chef in the world is Henri Ribordy, who presides over the kitchen in the Bankers' Club, at No. 120 Broadway, New York, where Wall street financiers dine in a luxurious room fitted up at a cost of $300,000. He draws a yearly salary of $18,000.

TWO FIRES SET IN PROVIDENCE

Believe Attempt to Burn South Water Street Buildings Is Work of Boys

Providence, Jan. 14.—Two attempts were made here to set fire to buildings on South Water street, according to Deputy Fire Marshal Herbert B. Caffrey. It is believed that the attempted incendiarism is the work of boys.

The first blaze was discovered by John J. Hickey, who found rags and papers burning in clapboards of the building at No. 372 South Water street, owned and occupied by Joseph Butterworth as a blacksmith shop. He put the first out and reported it to the police of the third precinct.

The second was discovered a short time later by Patrolman D. F. Farrelly in the unoccupied building at No. 362 South Water street. Firemen found that rags and papers had been stuffed between the clapboards and ignited.

WANTS TO SUSPEND WESTFIELD OFFICER

Westfield, Jan. 14.—Police Chief William A. Flouton has recommended two weeks' suspension from duty with loss of pay in the case of Patrolman George Hickson, who was charged with neglect of duty. The recommendation of the police chief is being considered by the police commission. Patrolman Hickson is the youngest member of the force.

Free Shoe Repairs for Needy Children

Brockton, Jan. 14.—Brockton's free cobbling shop for the repair of the shoes of needy children is now open for business. The shop was equipped by William L. Wright, a local merchant, more than $1,000 being spent in fitting up the shop. John O'Donnell, a world war veteran, is in charge and he will have a number of expert shoe workers in the shop with him.

Mr. Wright volunteered to equip the shop after Attendance Officer Charles P. Brooks made the report that scores of Brockton children were obliged to absent themselves from school because they did not have proper shoes. An appeal has been sent out for second-hand shoes to be fixed up and presented to the children.

WADE'S COUNSEL TO APPEAL VERDICT

Bridgeport, Ct., Jan. 14.—Frederick E. Morgan of counsel for Elwood B. Wade, who has been sentenced to be hanged on May 20 for the murder of George E. Nott, has filed notice of intention to appeal with the clerk of the Superior Court. The grounds for the appeal were not announced. Mr. Morgan said that it would take a good part of the twenty days allowed to determine this point.

Truck Kills Everett Man

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 14.—Leopold Levine, nineteen years old, of No. 471 Ferry street, Everett, a member of F. Troop, 3rd U. S. Cavalry, was killed when run over by a heavy army truck at Fort Ethan Allen, where he was stationed.

STUDENT SAVED FROM DROWNING

Cambridge Boy in Icy Charles Half an Hour Before Rescue

Immersed in the freezing water of the Charles River for nearly half an hour after he had broken through the ice, while skating, Charles E. Hall, twelve years old, was rescued from drowning by Cambridge police and firemen.

Young Hall, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Hall of No. 3 Concord avenue, Cambridge, and a student at the Browne & Nichols School, Cambridge, fell into the water near the Larz Anderson bridge.

He is accredited with being a good swimmer, but his heavy overcoat prevented his crawling out on the ice. He succeeded in keeping above water, however, until the firemen, assisted by police officers, ran a ladder over the ice to him.

HUB REVOLVER PERMIT USELESS IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 14.—Many persons get revolver permits in other States and come here armed, believing the law cannot touch them, Magistrate Sweetser said. He held Joseph P. Mantia, twenty-eight years old, of Boston, in $1,000 when the man was arraigned in Jefferson Market Court, charged with violating the Sullivan law. The police said Mantia has a prison record. When arraigned he showed a Boston revolver permit.

TELLS BOSTON WOMEN HOW TO TEST LINEN

How to test pure linen was told Boston women at the clothing information bureau by A. H. Dunning, a linen expert. The principal ways are: (1) Moisten a bit of the material. If it wets through quickly it is linen. (2) Pull out a thread. If it is long and wiry instead of short and fluffy, it is linen. It is cheaper in the long run to buy pure linen, said Mr. Dunning, and linen that has been bleached by a fast process wears less well than grass bleached linen. He pointed out that the term "pure linen" was greatly abused.

MANY AUTO OWNERS HEED APPEAL FOR STARVING

Many of the 250,000 auto owners of Massachusetts, to whom an appeal for the 3,500,000 starving children of Europe has been addressed by the committee in charge of the drive for this State, already have responded and the committee believes that others of the State can save 250,000 children by contributing $10 each and joining the "Massachusetts Save a Child's Life Auto Club." This would mean, says the appeal, merely the cost of a few gallons of gasoline.

Do you know where the purest and best flavored maple sugar comes from? The flavor of the New Karo tells you

Over a thousand tons of rich maple sugar from Vermont and Canada to flavor the New Karo

Over five million cans were consumed last year. This is a greater sale, by far, of any kind of maple or maple flavor syrup.

If you are particular about the syrup you buy, and the price you pay for it—the New Karo is your kind of syrup.

Perfectly delicious in rich maple flavor—yet very moderate in price. So moderate that you can serve it every day, every meal. And all grocers everywhere have it.

Go to your grocer today and get a can of the New Karo. Try it just once. If you are not absolutely satisfied, return it—and your grocer will give you back your money.

DRY LAW KILLING U. S. SHIPPING

Witnesses Testify That Passengers Desert American Liners for 'Wet' Vessels

Washington, Jan. 14.—Unless the sale of liquor is permitted on American passenger vessels in foreign trade, it means the death of the U. S. steamship business, P. A. S. Franklin of the International Mercantile Marine, asserted before the House Judiciary Committee when it took up the Edmonds bill to permit bars on passenger ships in ocean service flying the American flag.

Other witnesses informed the committee that the prospective enforcement of prohibition aboard the steamships had already resulted in the transfer of many to foreign registry and Representative Edmonds, author of the bill, declared that "foreign ships will handle the big bulk of ocean traffic if the ruling of the Attorney-General that no liquor can be served on ships flying the American flag is put into effect."

A. C. Smith of the New York-Cuban Mail Company said that, although the ruling of the Attorney-General had not become effective, extension of American passenger business is at a standstill because of the uncertainty. He added that his company is now reconditioning two large ships to be operated under the American flag, but that it will be necessary to transfer them to foreign registry if the ruling is enforced.

SECRETARY-TREASURER OF NEW HAMPSHIRE LEGION

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 14.—Captain George W. Merrill of Concord has been elected State secretary treasurer of the American Legion to succeed Major Frank J. Abbott, resigned. Captain Morrill is in charge of the payment of the State bonus in the office of the adjutant general. He is a charter member of Concord Post of the Legion and has twice refused nomination for post commander.

162 Cats Entered in Show

Mrs. Edmund C. Luster and her cream-colored Persian, "Andy," the only animal of this type entered at the cat show.

Every type of feline, from the haughty and petted Angora to the lowly common cat, greeted patrons at the opening of the eighteenth annual show of the Boston Cat Club, held at the Hotel Vendome.

One hundred and sixty-two subjects of catland were entered in the show, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the Children's Hospital and Convalescent Home Endowment Fund. This is the largest number of animals on display at the show for many years.

Cat lovers from all over the State were in attendance today, the final day of the show.

HIDE ILLNESS OF LAUTNER

Denver, Colo., Jan. 14.—Considerable mystery surrounds the exact nature of the illness suffered by Joseph F. Lautner, Harvard senior and president of the Harvard Glee Club, who was found at the home of his aunt after a search of four days.

Mrs. Charles Melzer, his mother's sister, at whose home he is living, refuses to discuss the Harvard chorister's illness beyond the fact that he is under the care of a physician.

Dr. Clinton O. Hickey, family physician for the Lautners before they left Denver several years ago, was likewise uncommunicative as to the youth's ailment. He said that he had not diagnosed the Harvard's man's case yet, but added that Lautner was suffering from a severe cold.

When asked if Lautner simply wandered away from his room in Cambridge, Mass., without knowing where he was going, Mrs. Melzer replied: "Well, he knew enough to come to me."

N. H. Solon Would Put Curb on Pianists

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 14.—A bill to create a Piano Tuner's Commission, introduced in the state Legislature by Representative Farrar of Littleton, brought the remark from William J. Ahern, dean of the House, that if the bill would regulate piano playing he would put his shoulder to the wheel to secure its passage.

The bill provides for a commission of skilled piano tuners, which would have charge of the tuners in the State, and who would draw a salary of $7 a day.

FIREMEN SAVE FAMILIES

Women and Children Carried Down Ladders at $100,000 New Bedford Blaze

New Bedford, Jan. 14.—Encompassed by flames which swept a large building containing tenements and stores at Bullard street and Acushnet avenue, here, women and children were saved from death by firemen, who carried the victims down ladders. Many, clad only in their night clothing, suffered severely from the cold.

One fireman was overcome by smoke and rescued from the building and another was injured. Many of the families lost all their property. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

Oriental Roundup Denied

Washington, Jan. 14.—Immigration officials of the Department of Labor today denied that a nation-wide round-up of Chinese and Japanese ineligibles is about to launched.

Save Half-Starved Boy in Sealed Car

Wells River, Vt., Jan. 14—Without food for two days and suffering seriously from cold, Paul Byers, aged sixteen, son of Clarence Byers, was released from a sealed freight car at Newport, Vt., in which he had been a prisoner for two days. The boy's father had thrashed him for failing to return home immediately after a school session, and he "hopped" a freight.

Trainmen discovered the plight of the imprisoned boy in the Newport railroad yard. They fed him and gave him shelter, following which he was turned over to a constable and returned to his home here.

$500,000 LEFT TO YALE BY BRIDGEPORT MAN

New Haven, Jan. 14—Secretary Anson Phelps Stokes (Yale University) announced that university had been informed officially of a bequest of $500,000 under will of A. R. Judson of Bridgeport.

STORE BREAKS AND AUTO THEFTS IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Jan. 14.—The store of George E. Blanchard of No. 513 Andover street was broken into and $100 stolen. Stores on Franklin street were broken into during the night, according to reports to the police, but no goods were taken. A touring car was stolen from in front of a theatre. A machine parked near the stolen one was robbed of two tires while its owner was attending the theatre.

COL. ROOSEVELT SEES HARDING

Urges Wood for Secretary of War; General, However, May Go to Philippines

By International News Service.

Marion, O., Jan. 14.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., arrived here early today to confer with President-elect Harding. In January sixteen years ago he hung about the White House and watched his father struggle with the formation of a cabinet. There he was not consulted and his advice was not asked. Today he not only discussed administration problems with the next President, but also faced the probability that he would be at least an assistant secretary in the next cabinet.

It will be no novelty to have a Roosevelt in the cabinet. Precedent would place the younger member of the family as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, but it is regarded as entirely possible that Teddy, Jr., might be named as assistant to the Secretary of War.

It is deemed certain here that Col. Roosevelt did not come to plead his own cause, but to advocate in every way possible the appointment of Gen. Leonard Wood as secretary of war. In the last two days, General Wood has been strongly urged for that post by other visitors from New York and elsewhere. Col. Roosevelt was the staunch adherent of his father's friend and comrade in arms throughout the pre-convention campaign and is known to feel himself still bound to the general by the strongest ties.

It is reported on excellent authority, however, that General Wood may be asked to assume the governor-generalship of the Philippines. It is asserted that his experience in Cuba makes him eminently fitted for a position that has many difficulties. In this connection, the visit today of J. Cameron Forbes, former governor-general of the islands, is regarded as significant.

MILK PRICES STAY UP AS DEMAND DROPS

Plainfield, Ct., Jan. 14.—Increased supplies and decrease in the demand in the city districts has still further complicated the already involved milk problem in this State and Rhode Island. The large city distributors are daily left with thousands of quarts of milk on hand, but so far this has not resulted in any lowering of the retail price, as the distributors insist the price to the producer has been guaranteed and the retail price must be retained to meet it.

ABOLISH PORTSMOUTH COURT-MARTIAL BOARD

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 14.—The Navy Department has discontinued the general court-martial board at the local navy yard, and in the future prisoners held for trial will be heard at the Charlestown yard. The board here has been discharged as a matter of economy, mostly in the expense of transportation of men and guards.

Creditors Claim $978

The Worcester Knee Pants Company today was petitioned into bankruptcy by the action of three creditors, whose combined claims amounted to $978.38. The alleged act of bankruptcy was preferential payments.

Ten Reasons Why Boston Is a Great City

Boston is the finest city in the world. George R. Nutter, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, said so today. "Socially, economically and in a civic sense, Boston, rightly named the 'Hub of the Universe,' is excelled by none," he adds.

"Old Boston strides along with inexhaustible vigor, outstripping all big cities in many respects and many big cities in all respects. In business opportunities, in civic appreciation, in recreational and educational resources, Boston is without parallel. If you want it Boston has it.

"Here are a few of the many things in which Boston stands pre-eminent:

"1—Boston leads the country in development of educational institutions and in variety of educational opportunities. It has the finest group of medical buildings, and the foremost college of music.

"2—Boston is the richest American city in historical traditions. The Old North Church, Lexington, Concord, Bunker Hill, Faneuil Hall, and many other places are cornerstones in American history.

"3—Our city has provided more pioneers of mechanical skill and industrial initiative for building up other sections of the country than any other city in the world.

"4—No other city has as great a variety of manufactured products as the district of which Boston is the centre. From a hairpin to a super-dreadnought, from a pair of socks to the finest woolen products in the world, the manufacturing district of Metropolitan Boston produces everything required for mankind.

"5—Boston is the greatest centre of boot and shoe manufacturing, with an annual output sufficient to provide every adult in the country. In one Boston women's shoe factory, the largest in the world, 17,000 pairs of shoes are turned out every day. Boston is the headquarters of the industry which produces practically all of the shoe machinery used in the United States.

"6—When it comes to wool and cotton, Boston concedes the palm to none. It is the leading wool market of the world and has the finest wool warehouses of all. More wool passes through the port of Boston than any other city. Headquarters for most of the cotton mills are here.

"7—More fish were landed at the Boston Fish Pier in 1920, than at any other city in the world.

"8—Candy made in Boston is known throughout the world. This city has the largest candy factories and the largest output of high grade confectioneries of any American city.

"9—In the Boston district more rubber boots and shoes are made than in all other States combined.

"10—The finest natural harbor in the country is at Boston. The finest dry dock in the country is here and there is no ship afloat than cannot be accommodated in Boston."

WILL MAKE STUDY OF CHILD'S HEALTH AT B. U.

The health education of children from the kindergarten to the high school is the subject of a new course to be offered next semester at the Boston University School of Education by J. Mace Andress of the Boston Normal School, special agent of the United States Bureau of Education and associate director of the Child Health Organization of America.

WOMEN TO USE PLANE TO CARRY ELECTORAL VOTE

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 14.—The Nebraska electoral vote will be carried to Washington by airplane, it is announced here by Mrs. H. H. Wheeler of Lincoln and Mrs. Draper Smith of Omaha, delegate and alternate, who have accepted the offer of plane and pilot made by an Omaha newspaper. The women delegates will leave Omaha next Tuesday for the capital.

CONDUCTOR SAW MISSING WIDOW

Mrs. Carpenter Left Car at Ligonia, Me., He Says; Suicide Theory Discarded

Portland, Me., Jan. 14.—Investigation into the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Gertrude Carpenter, attractive and wealthy widow, was given a new angle when Clinton W. Higgins, conductor on the Portland to Old Orchard electric car, declares that Mrs. Carpenter started back to her home on his car on the night she slipped from sight, eleven days ago.

Higgins says that she left his car at Ligonia, a suburb two miles from Portland. No one has yet been found in Ligonia who saw Mrs. Carpenter after she left the car.

Although the water is but 300 feet from where the missing widow alighted the belief that she committed suicide is weakening in the minds of officials investigating her disappearance. Her relatives believe that there has been foul play. So strong is this opinion, that I. M. Wheelock, Mrs. Carpenter's father; Mrs. Clara Swanson, her sister, and Fred Wheelock, a brother, of Fitzdale, Vt., have hired a private detective to work on the case.

It has been discovered that the note found in Mrs. Carpenter's home after her disappearance is unsigned. The handwriting appears to be that of the missing woman, but the investigators lack positive proof that the widow is the author.

Scores Face Eviction in New Bedford

New Bedford, Jan. 14.—With 2,000 families victims of curtailment in the mills, Mayor Ashley declares that wholesale evictions are threatened unless industrial conditions improve speedily.

Scores of families are weeks behind in their rent and the housing problem is daily becoming more serious.

Charles A. Poirer, secretary of the Poor Department, says the city is powerless to help those facing eviction except to intercede with the landlords.

BOSTON-GLASGOW BOATS TO RESUME

According to an announcement made today by the Anchor line the company's passenger service between Boston and Glasgow is to be resumed after a suspension lasting more than a year. The initial sailing is to be made on March 7 by the steamship Massilia, which was on the route when it was first inaugurated in 1919. The Massilia will leave Glasgow on February 9 for New York and Boston. She has been employed on the service between Bombay and Liverpool. It is expected that the seventy-five cabins of the liner will be taken on the March sailing.

Another steamer will be assigned to run opposite the Massilia so as to provide a sailing from here every three weeks.

U. S. 'FOOLISH TO DISARM'

General Sarrail of France Says Policy 'Would Be a Catastrophe for World'

Paris, Jan. 14.—General Sarrail, who commanded the allied forces at Salonika, in an interview given to Universal Service today, declared that the United States would be foolish to disarm or to make any tentative arrangement toward disarmament unless every power in the world sitting in solemn conference agrees to take immediate measures not only for naval, but also for military disarmament.

"The day has not yet come," said General Sarrail, "when the navies and the armies of the world can be scrapped.

"While European nations refuse to disarm, while the Far Eastern problem is unsettled, while Russia is still in chaos, while the Near Orient is a seething caldron of hatreds and secular prejudices, it would be a catastrophe, to say the least, for the world, if the United States, the sole genuinely disinterested nation, the strength of which at present is our only guarantee against future wars, should listen to careless prophets.

$250,000 BANK FRAUD CHARGED

National Shawmut Secures Arrest of Kirk A. Landau, N. Y. Exchange Trafficker

New York, Jan. 14.—Kirk A. Landau, managing vice-president of the Pacat Finance Corporation, of No. 42 Broadway, was arrested here on complaint of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston.

The Pacat Finance Corporation was formed in August, 1920, to buy and sell foreign exchange. Officials of the Boston bank charged that Landau obtained by fraud and deceit for the Pacat Finance Corporation $250,000 to buy foreign exchange.

United States Judge John C. Knox named Stuart McNamara of No. 120 Broadway, temporary receiver of the Pacat concern December 30 last. At that time the firm's liabilities were given as $1,100,000 and its assets as $482,000.

MARCH OF UNEMPLOYED IN LONDON IS CHECKED

London, Jan. 14—Fifty unemployed attempted today to march into Downing street for a demonstration before the Premier's official residence, but were turned back by the police.

NEW BEDFORD SEAMAN MURDERED IN BRAZIL

New Bedford, Jan. 14.—John A. Collins, twenty-three years old, member of the crew of the steamship Keresan of the United American lines, was murdered at Santos, Brazil, on January 7, according to word received here by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Collins, Jr., of No. 92 Smith street, this city. The steamship company wrote the parents that a telegram received by them through the Masters' Agency of Santos, said that Collins, who was a first class seaman, had been assassinated. Congressman Walsh has been asked to obtain the facts surrounding the youth's death.

Guests at Starving Children's Dinner Contribute $250,000 to Fund

"America's task of saving starving children in Europe is steadily diminishing as Europe regains normalcy, but there are still 3,500,000 youngsters to be fed until next harvest comes. Are we going to abandon the last chapter in our relief work and let them perish?"

This appeal, in varied form, was made by Herbert C. Hoover, Governor Channing H. Cox, Mayor Andrew J. Peters and President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University, to some 3,000 persons at the "invisible guest" dinner in Symphony Hall.

The $100 dinner of stew, bread and cocoa—rations given destitute children across the water—proved a big success. Tickets ranged from $25 to $100 apiece, but there were many persons present who had subscribed greater amounts, so it was estimated that Mr. Hoover's guests contributed around $250,000. Massachusetts has contributed over $700,000 to the fund, of which Boston is accredited with over $500,000.

Food served at the dinner was contributed by several Boston concerns, each giving articles that they handle, while the serving was done by some 300 girls dressed in nurses' uniforms. The waitresses were in charge of the Misses Sybil Appleton and Dorothy Forbes, and they represented the Junior League, the League of Catholic Women, the Jewish Federation and the Y. W. C. A.

WOMAN VIOLINIST A HIT.

The Harvard Glee Club sang several selections and the violin playing of Isolde Menges was a distinct hit. It was the Russian violinist's first appearance in Boston, and she demonstrated that she is one of the world's foremost women violinists.

In the centre of the head table stood a high chair, with two candles burning in front of it. This represented the 3,500,000 starving children of Europe, the flickering candles denoting their steady sinking to death for want of food.

Many a tear was shed as Mr. Hoover told of these starving youngsters, who, he said, came daily to the food stations with a prayer for sustenance. "I would rather see the flag of America fly over the hearts of these children than over any citadel in the world," he declared.

"We must save these children to keep open the love of humanity," he said. "Your children and my children would not be worth the self-respect of America if we turn these children in the street. Upon their well-being depends the future of Europe. America's hand has raised up 15,000,000 children in Europe to replace the millions lost in the war.

"This appeal is not for a new venture, not an enlargement of American relief towards Europe. It is an appeal from the great American organizations which have been engaged, one way or another, in saving the lives of children almost since the outbreak of the great war, that they may receive the support necessary to maintain until the next harvest the children they have already in their care.

3,500,000 DEPENDENT TOTS.

"American charitable organizations have saved upwards of 15,000,000 children since the outbreak of the war in 1914. The burden has steadily diminished with the growth of peace, the strengthening of the new governments and the steady recuperation of agriculture. About 3,500,000 children are now dependent upon these associations until the next harvest.

"Success so far obtained shows the goodness of the American heart. This is true in spite of the great difficulty of many of our own people. Peace of the world is the product of good will among men.

"We are not asking for money to spend in Europe, but for the purchase of our surplus commodities in the United States and to maintain the necessary American personnel devoted to the organization and upbuilding of these local institutions and also to supply them the medical service that they cannot find for themselves.

"We have in our warehouses and on our farms today eighteen months' food supply for the entire American people. We have a harvest coming again within another eight months. Our shelves are overloaded with clothing, our warehouses with raw material; we have ample coal, and our people are warmly housed.

"If there is any hunger or any cold in the United States, it is due to foolish functioning of either our social, our economic or our political system. We do not deserve the name of intelligent men if we cannot overcome this self-made handicap at home and still do our duty abroad."

$1,000 FOR PRIEST ON 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Lowell, Jan. 14.—Twelve hundred parishioners and friends of Father Charles J. Galligan, rector of St. Margaret's parish, gathered at the dinner and reception given in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination. Former Mayor J. B. Casey, after an address of presentation, handed the priest a check for $1,000, a gift from the parishioners. Mayor Perry D. Thompson was another speaker, as was the Rev. Stephen Murray, assistant rector.

Widow, 79, Fills Pulpit of Methodist Church

Seventy-nine years old, a widow with grown children, and just ordained as a clergyman in the Methodist Church and placed in charge of the Peterboro, N. H., church, where she preaches every Sunday.

That is the record of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Barker, the oldest woman ever ordained in the Methodist or any other church.

Years ago her husband, a veteran of the Civil War, died, leaving "Mother Barker," as she was known, with two young children to feed, clothe and educate.

For years she devoted herself to that task, working in a shoe shop to get the necessary money, and at night studying theology and her Bible.

She early developed a regular routine, which had for its base her adage, "Never waste a minute."

If she had bread to bake, she would study while it was in the oven.

"Every moment is precious" is another of her mottoes. Never in all the years of her busy life has she sat down with folded hands, content to do nothing.

Her cakes are famous among the housekeepers of Peterboro—almost as famous as her sermons.

"RAIN-IN-THE-FACE" WINS IN RACE WITH THIEF

New York, Jan. 14.—Capture of a thief by a long chase through Fifth avenue, accompanied by a tribal war whoop, was effected by Rain-in-the-Face, doorman of a club from which the property had been taken. Rain-in-the-Face is grandson of a chief of the Hunk Pa Pa tribe. The pursued, Thomas Murray, surrendered a suit case to the police and pleaded guilty to the theft.

Will Monkey Glands Make Weak People Strong?

Evidence Seems to Be Convincing That Anaemia and General Run-down Conditions Are Due to Run-down Glands

New Gland Tablets Guaranteed to Bring Decided Results in 10 Days or Money Refunded

Did you read the newspaper accounts reproduced here? They are so interesting and may mean so much to thousands of readers of this paper that they deserve repetition. They tell the story of the reported remarkable results from the use of monkey and other animal glands in making decrepit old men young and restoring health and strength to young men and women who have become run down.

Whoever thinks these are unusual cases should keep their eye on the press reports of similar medical victories and know that many physicians are now treating weaknesses of both men and women in this modern scientific way.

Scientists tell us that in the glands they have found a vital secret of life which are called "hormones." To find these essential chemical elements which they have discovered help control organs, blood, nerves and tissue-building, they now go straight to life itself and from healthy, young cattle and sheep, take the gland-power which we need and prepare it in tablet form, so it may be taken pleasantly and conveniently.

For Young and Old

It should not be supposed that gland extracts are effective only with prematurely old people. They are being used extensively by young men and women who are anaemic, run-down, nervous, thin, pale and weak, with results that seem little short of surprising. As a tonic and strength-builder, animal gland substance, it would seem, has its greatest use.

The reason appears to be perfectly simple. According to those who have given this new treatment the greatest thought, our health and vigor depend largely on the glands which help govern the activity of muscles, brain and organs.

So when we become run-down, gland extracts from animals may be used to supply the very substance which the glands have failed to produce. And the purpose is that the cause of the run-down conditions be attacked. This idea of using animal extracts is not in itself new;—pepsin which has been used for years for indigestion, comes from the stomach of animals.

While it may seem almost too good to be true, there have been reports of people who almost doubled their strength and vitality by this theory and frequently results are said to be felt the first few days. In fact it would sometimes look as though there was little reason for being run-down, worn out and nervous, or of growing prematurely old, for gland extracts from vigorous sheep and cattle can now be purchased at any drug store under the name of Glandex Compound, which also contains peptonate of iron—perhaps the best known blood builder.

Free Trial—Guaranteed

You are not asked to risk a single cent to find out how Glandex Compound may give you the buoyant lively spirit of youth, a firm elastic step, bright eyes, rosy cheeks, the strength and endurance and the hearty appetite of the rejuvenated mind and body. All you have to do is to take Glandex Compound according to the simple directions for ten days. If, at the end of that time, results are not perfectly satisfactory, your druggist is authorized to refund your money at once without question or red tape, on your simple request.

This is the fairest offer that could be made, and it is only because of the success of the new gland extract treatment that it would be possible to back Glandex Compound with such a remarkable guarantee. Remember you risk nothing. Go to your druggist today as Glandex Compound is scarce because of the great demand. And remember you risk nothing. The Glandex guarantee is backed by all the resources of the Glandex Company, Inc., 244 West 29th Street, New York.

Monkey Gland May Help Him Regain Old Title

How to Tell if Your Glands Are Starving

Gland extracts have secured so much publicity as a result of having helped people in so many ways that some may look upon them as a remedy for everything. This is a mistake. In order to correct this impression the laboratories have issued the following list of symptoms which might warrant the use of Glandex Compound (gland extracts in tablet form combined with iron) as a tonic.

Weakness, Thinness, Headache, Lack of Vitality, Mental Depression, Irritability, Nervousness, Despondency, Anaemia, Sluggishness, Sleeplessness, Paleness—And general run-down conditions.

William L. Phinney Reads Boston American Article on Education to Pupils

Complimenting the Boston American editorials as [illegible] food in the community, William L. Phinney of No. 6[illegible] Hastings street, [illegible], master at the Dudley School, Dudley street, Roxbury, today declared that he thought so much of one that he brought it to the attention of several educators and read it to pupils.

"I was in a street car recently and saw the back page of the Boston American in front of me on the floor," said Mr. Phinney. "I noted a paragraph in the editorial dealing with education which appealed to me. Naturally, being interested in education, I picked up the paper and read the item to which I refer, cut it out and pasted it in a notebook."

EDITORIAL IN NOTEBOOK.

Mr. Phinney produced his notebook and opened the cover disclosing the portion of the Boston American editorial which reads:

"A college education does not make a man or woman. Knowledge can come and wisdom can linger. But it develops the mind just as exercise develops the muscles of the body, and the group of men and women who have a college education will handle problems which require the exercise of the mind [illegible] better than the same [illegible] of men and women who have not had the advantage of a college education, just as a group of men and women who have taken bodily exercise will average a better physical performance than the same number of men and women who have not taken bodily exercise."

"I must confess that the editorial gave me food for thought," continued Mr. Phinney. "I [illegible] pupils in the Dudley School and [illegible] used it as the basis for a [illegible]. During my talk to the pupils I emphasized the fact that each boy [illegible] to profit [illegible] editorial pointed out.

"The gentleman who wrote that editorial [illegible] a wonderful grasp of the educational situation. He is to be commended for the comprehensive way in which he presents his ideas along [illegible]. He shows the advantages of a college education, and brings out in a clear manner what I had in mind when I gave my talk on his editorial to the boys in the Dudley School."

McCARTHY TO TRANSFER AGENTS TO RHODE ISLAND

MAINE WOMAN IS GOVERNOR'S AID

Miss Gertrude Plaisted Is Assistant Secretary to Parkhurst

Augusta, Me., Jan. 14—Governor Frederick H. Parkhurst, approving of the participation of women in the affairs of the State and nation, recognized the women by selecting Miss Gertrude H. Plaisted of Bangor as his assistant secretary.

Miss Plaisted is an ardent Republican and did her bit in the last campaign towards the election of Colonel Parkhurst despite the fact that her relatives on both sides of the family have always been Democrats.

Her father, General Harris M. Plaisted, was elected Governor of Maine in 1880 and he was the first Democratic governor to be chosen in this State since before the Civil War.

Her brother, ex-Governor Frederick W. Plaisted, now postmaster of Augusta, was elected governor thirty years later in 1910, and he was the second governor of the Democratic persuasion to be elected since sometime in the late 60s. Her mother's father, the late Frances W. Hill of Exeter, was the Democratic candidate for governor in [illegible], and her uncle, F. W. Hill of Exeter, has long been prominent in the Democratic politics of Penobscot county and has represented that county in the Maine Senate as a Democrat.

Miss Plaisted and Mrs. Parkhurst, wife of Governor Parkhurst, were girlhood companions in Bangor, although Miss Plaisted was born in this city. She was educated in this country and abroad and was sojourning in Switzerland at the outbreak of the World War.

Bright, New Hats With the Promise of Spring

THE new hats are especially attractive with their trimmings of gay fruits and flowers. Fashionable ribbon bows and drooping glycerine ostrich trim many other smart hats.

These hats are made of satin, taffeta, gros de Londres and lustrous silk, combined with straw. The shapes are becoming and stylish; quaint pokes, turbans, sailors and effective off-the-face styles. 5.00, 7.50, 10.00

Marvelo TRIMMED HATS 7.50

A collection worthy of special mention, for they are as chic and well made as hats at much higher prices.

Chapeaux du Temps 10.00

Salon at 10.00, a beautiful selection of the newest hats for immediate and Spring wear awaits your inspection.

Remember—These are not markdowns from impossible Profiteer Prices; they are reductions from the honest value prices at which thousands of these garments have been sold.

Every garment in this sale is Morse-made to meet the exacting requirements of customers whose experience has led them to expect more than ordinary quality, style and workmanship in Morse clothes. Back of these clothes is the purchasing power and tailoring skill of an organization with a record of nearly seventy years' successful dealing with the public of New England, in which it has never deviated from the highest standards in the production of clothing of distinction.

The suits include the latest styles and the most conservative models; plain colors and mixtures in all the popular and standard materials; suits for young men, men not so young, and men of mature years; tall men, short men, thin men, fat men, and men of standard size and shape.

Among the overcoats are big, burly coats for motor or sport wear; heavy coats for street and general use; good stormproof ulsters and unusually well tailored garments for evening wear.

Every Blue Serge Suit in our tremendous stock and all of the Supreme Quality Overcoats which have sold for $90 to $115, are repriced at startling reductions for this sale

GERMANY FEARS FRENCH FORCE

Berlin Anticipates More Driving to Wall From New Paris Government

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Jan. 14. — "Gewehr bei fuss," which literally translated means "stand by your guns," was declared by a member of the Cabinet to me today to be the apprehensive attitude of Germany on the fall of the French government.

Germany is fearful that the coming French Cabinet will be more militaristic toward Germany and more imperialistic in general in its attitude toward Europe than was the Leygues Cabinet.

LEYGUES TOO MILD.

The interpretation placed here in official circles upon the fall of the French government is that Leygues on one hand was not brutally forceful enough toward Germany to suit the imperialistic forces in France and on the other hand was too much inclined to listen to England's admonitions not to demand the impossible from Germany.

In diplomatic circles there is a report that the order from Washington withdrawing Ambassador Wallace from the Supreme Council was the final blow to the Leygues cabinet.

Today Germany is apprehensive of the developments of the coming weeks. A quick decline in the mark after its rise of the past few days is immediately reflected by the financial barometer of pressure from bank circles.

GERMANY'S FEARS.

That a more energetic attitude may be taken by the new French government toward Germany in the question of reparations and disarmament and other severe clauses of the Versailles treaty is foreshadowed in an interview printed in the German papers with a member of the French foreign office.

Nor are there any illusions here but that Germany will be driven more than ever to the wall. German hopes now more than ever turn to England and to the restraining influence upon France by America.

Satisfaction at the fall of the French cabinet is felt only by the extreme radical and extreme conservative parties, both of which feel that the more severe the attitude of France toward Germany the more it will help their particular cause along.

SENATOR McCORMICK SAILS HOME THIS WEEK

Paris, Jan. 14.—Senator Medill McCormick, who has arrived in Paris from Rome, refused to make any comment on observations on his trip to Italy. "The report that my visit to Europe was on behalf of the Standard Oil Company is too silly to deny," declared the Senator.

On his arrival here Senator McCormick immediately got busy arranging interviews with French chiefs of state. He said that he expects to sail for New York next week-end on either the Imperator or the La France.

BAY STATE FRIENDS OF INDIA MEET JAN. 30

The first meeting of the Massachusetts Friends of India will be held at the Quincy House on Sunday, January 30. Delegates from every part of Massachusetts will be present at the affair. The different phases of the Swaraj and the Non-Co-Operation movement which is now stirring India will be considered.

Prominent Americans and Indians will speak at the meeting on conditions in India, where history is being made each day. The meetings will be held at 2 p. m. and 7.30 p. m.

7 SENTENCES IMPOSED TO CHECK BOY CRIMES

Lawrence, Jan. 14. — To check the alarming spread of juvenile crimes in this city, Judge J. J. Mahoney of this city sentenced five boys, all about ten years old, to the Lyman School and two others to the Shirley School. One of the Shirley School sentences was fixed for six months and the other was appealed. The boys had been implicated in many breaks. Anthony Di Mar[illegible], fifteen years old, who was charged with snatching a pocketbook from a Manchester, N. H., woman was sentenced to the Shirley School.

FIRE CHIEF'S AUTO WRECKED IN COLLISION

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 14.—Deputy Fire Chief Edwin Merrill had a narrow escape when his automobile collided with another machine owned and driven by Joseph Quirin while responding to an alarm. Both cars were badly wrecked but the occupants were [illegible]. Quirin was driving an enclosed car and failed to hear the horn on the fire auto at Amherst and Pine streets, one of the blindest corners in the city and where there have been numerous collisions.

Make sure of your copy of next Monday's Boston American!

The Movie Test Editor can today think of no more important message to convey to participants in the $5,000 Movie Player Identification Test than that which is comprised in the above two paragraphs.

The Sunday Advertiser!

Next Monday's Boston American!

A FINAL REPRINT.

And the reason for making this recommendation is that the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser, co-operating in this great Test of the powers of observation and memory of New England movie-lovers, will on Sunday and Monday offer a FINAL re-print of ALL Back Pictures.

Owing to the fact that under existing conditions neither paper can surrender space enough for the re-printing of fifty-two pictures, it has been arranged to re-print the Test Pictures of "odd" days in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Test Pictures of the "even" days in Monday's Boston American.

The "odd" days are the First, Third, Fifth, Seventh, Ninth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Nineteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth Days of the Test.

DISTRIBUTION OF PICTURES.

The "even" days are the Second, Fourth, Sixth, Eighth, Tenth, Twelfth, Fourteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-second, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth.

These Test Pictures will be re-printed in Monday's Boston American.

We explained yesterday why the division was not so made that Pictures 1 to 26 should appear on Sunday and Pictures 27 to 54 on Monday. Under THAT arrangement, readers of the Boston Sunday Advertiser would receive only some of the reprints they received last Sunday. They would be getting no later reprints; none of this week's.

There will be a tremendous demand everywhere in New England for the Boston Sunday Advertiser!

There will be an EQUALLY big demand for next Monday's Boston American.

Make sure of BOTH papers by speaking AT ONCE to your regular newsdealer!

THIS WILL BE FINAL.

This will be absolutely the FINAL re-print of Back Pictures. On Tuesday of next week the great $5,000 Test will become a matter of fact affair. On Wednesday it will be half-completed. By that time—if you mean to compete for the First Award of $1,000 or one of the other awards—you will have entered seriously upon the enjoyable [illegible] of "identifying" the moving picture players or—you will have decided to stay out.

At the present writing, the gates are swung wide open to all. After the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Monday Boston American re-prints, the gates will be closed and this Opportunity will be gone forever.

You still have a chance! To take advantage of it, you would better say a word to Mr. Newsdealer today. Do it now!

AWARDS ARE GENEROUS.

The Awards are among the most generous ever offered in connection with a newspaper enterprise of the kind. In addition to the First Award of $1,000 there are other awards of $750, $500, $400, $300, $200, $150 and $100. There are 211 lesser Awards, the total value of the entire list being $5,000!

And every award will be paid IN CASH!

This is the Twenty-fifth Day of a Sixty-day Test. Today's Test Pictures, No. 49 and No. 50, are on the Picture Page. See if you recognize the players. If you do, there is no reason in the world why you cannot compete on equal terms with any other participant.

But, please do not expect that the Test will continue to the end to be the "easiest thing ever." We have delayed putting masks on the players' faces, have postponed clipping the pictures here and there, as we promised to do. * * * Pretty soon, now.

MAKE SURE OF PAPERS.

Those of you who mean business will heed our earnest advice to MAKE SURE of a Boston Sunday Advertiser, and a copy of next Monday's Boston American, for the LAST re-printing of Back Pictures.

In the Boston Sunday Advertiser will be Test Pictures Nos. 1, 2, 5, 6, 9, 10, 13, 14, 17, 18, 21, 22, 25, 26, 29, 30, 33, 34, 47, 38, 41, 42, 45, 46, 49, 50, 53 and 54.

And in MONDAY'S Boston American Test Pictures Nos. 3, 4, 7, 8, 11, 12, 15, 16, 19, 20, 23, 24, 27, 28, 31, 32, 35, 36, [illegible] 40, 43, 44, 47, 48, 51, 52, 53 and 56.

Wait!

B. & A. HIGHWAY MEETS FAVOR

Many Argue for Watson's Project at Hearing; Would Add Millions to Values

Councillor "Jerry" Watson's proposed "highway on stilts" over the tracks of the Boston & Albany would add millions in real estate values to the city and would be feasible before electrification of the road by proper ventilation, several speakers declared at a hearing before the City Council special committee.

Chairman John J. O'Callaghan of the Street Commission said the roofing of the tracks would be accompanied by comparatively little land damage and would eliminate the smoke nuisance which menaces and injures property along the line from the South station to Huntington avenue, the course of the proposed highway.

FEASIBILITY DOUBTED.

Henry B. Harriman, former chairman of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, declared the highway [illegible] be erected over the tracks and the smoke [illegible] of [illegible] ventilation. This [illegible] relieving the congestion in Boston's streets, could be built before the road's electrification, which might be some years hence, he stated.

Chairman O'Callahan while doubting the feasibility of the plan admitted that the highway would add millions to the city in real estate valuation.

Dr. John C. Jones of Brookline backed up the Harriman idea and said a highway could be erected 120 feet wide with spaces for ventilation. He suggested the highway as a permanent memorial to Boston's men who served in the World war.

CRAM FAVORS HIGHWAY.

Chairman Ralph Adams Cram of the City Planning Board favored the highway provided the Boston & Albany electrified its lines. Richard F. Andrews of the street commissioners also gave the [illegible] approval.

Councillor Watson, who presided at the meeting, announced that he would call upon the Law Department for advice on the city's [illegible] and would ask Mayor Peters to have the project studied by an engineer from the birdge service.

Rules of Movie Player Identity Trial

The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser's new Moving Picture Players' Identification Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and nineteen cash awards will be given by these two newspapers to their readers who submit the largest percentage of correct identifications to the 120 pictures to be published in these two newspapers.

All employees of the Boston American, the Boston Sunday Advertiser and their families and all moving picture players and others connected with the moving picture industry are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The Test will consist of 120 pictures of favorite moving picture players, to be printed two each day in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, first picture Sunday, December 19, 1920.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which will be run by the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser will not debar anyone from entering this Test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE identification to each picture and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award and not more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every identification must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser or on a page of some book form by itself, accompanied either by the picture furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence and [illegible] of the participant on each identification [illegible].

Do not send your identification in "list" form, i. e., do not write identifications under [illegible] on a [illegible] of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct identifications, awards will be given to [illegible] the largest percentage of correct identifications.

In case of a tie awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exactness in spelling, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way, the tied participants will receive [illegible] awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their identifications before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your identifications from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together at one time.

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first identifications sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All identifications must be delivered to the Boston American Movie Test Headquarters at No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person within specified time limit which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing identifications must be legibly addressed as follows: "Movie Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass., P. O. Box 238," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped in the upper left hand corner.

As all identifications will contain written or printed matter, if mailed it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at regular letter rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first class matter. The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserve the right to refuse to consider any sets of identifications on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Movie Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass. Questions will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser. If participants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such reply, or they may phone Main 5180, or call in person.

The Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly and properly conducting the test, and the decision of the Boston American Movie Test Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions now made or to be made.

DERRILL PRATT SAYS HE IS OUT OF BASEBALL

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 14.—Derrill Pratt announced today that he would remain at University of Michigan as coach of the athletic teams of that institution. Pratt said he liked the work here, and President Frazee's statement to the effect that he (Pratt) would sign with the Red Sox was entirely without foundation.

OXFORD ROWS CAMBRIDGE ON THAMES, MARCH 30

London, Eng., Jan. 14.—The date of the Oxford-Cambridge boat crew race has been set at March 30. The crews will train over the Putney-Mortlake course during the latter part of the month.

SHRUBB SIGNS LONG CONTRACT WITH OXFORD

Oxford, Eng., Jan. 14. — Alfred Shrubb has signed to coach the Oxford track and cross-country teams for the next seven years, according to an announcement given out by the college athletic authorities. Shrubb, who is now in Toronto, Can., with his family, will start for England within a few days.

Theatres Co-operating in Test

The American takes pleasure in again calling the attention of participants in the $5,000 Movie Player Identification Test to the names and locations of the nearly four hundred New England motion picture playhouses which are doing everything in their power to make the Test interesting to and easy for their patrons.

In each of the splendid theatres named below there are flashed upon the screen at every performance the Test Pictures as they appear daily in the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

DON'T forget that you will need next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser AND next Monday's Boston American and NEVER forget the splendid spirit shown on your behalf by these co-operating theatres.

BOSTON SUNDAY ADVERTISER

Range Narrow and Trading Dull on Local Exchange; Recessional on Curb

The Boston market had a weak start and did not improve much during the morning. The majority of issues sold unchanged on initial transactions, and this will give an indication of the confined range of prices in general. Coppers were dull and most of them showed no price variation. But reports from the metal market are more cheerful. A large New York selling interest marketed a substantial block of the red metal on Wednesday at 13½ cents a pound and it is predicted that the price will soon be firm at 13¾ cents. Some issues are refusing business at the first named figure. Packing issues were a shade lower. Rails were weak. Auto Accessory shares were torpid. Calumet & Hecla advanced five points on its opening sale.

Small gains were made by Massachusetts Gas, which sold ex-dividend, Mohawk and Loew's, Inc. United Drug first preferred recovered its dividend on its first sale. Drug common was fractionally higher.

One to two point losses were sustained by Boston & Maine, American Sugar common and preferred. Agricultural Chemical and Maine Central. Fractional declines were recorded for American Telephone, American Woolen preferred, New Haven, Ventura, Bigheart, Waldorf, International Products, Libby, National Leather and Lider.

CURB WAS WEAK.

The Curb had a rather weak opening, traders in this market showing an inclination to realize profits. Trading was of moderate volume. Early leaders were Boston & Montana and Mutual. Stocks to recede at once included Albany Divide, Arizona Tip Top, Bagdad, Ruby, Merrimac Development, Mutual, Randolph and United Verde Extension. Among those in advance at the outset were Alvarado, Chief, Texana and Eureka.

At the end of an hour Mutual was off 10 cents at 55 cents, Allied Oil 2 cents at 15 cents, Crystal 1 cent at 37 cents, Merrimac Development 1 cent at 5½ cents, Texana 1 cent at 13 cents and United Verde Extension ¼ at 27¼. Boston & Montana and Randolph had recovered losses.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

Steel's Financial Strength

It is believed when U. S. Steel directors report late in this month as to fourth quarter earnings for 1920 that net of from $4,000,000 to $5,000,00 will be shown for the period. The corporation is in a strong financial position. It is operating at about 90 per cent. of its capacity, has accumulated more than $450,000,000 surplus in six years, has working capital close to $600,000,000, and more than $200,000,000 cash on hand.

Rail Earnings

Chicago & Northwestern reports for nine months ended September 30, operating revenue $90,989,884, deficit $1,790,514, gross income $4,327,229, deficit after dividends $8,518,031.

Canadian National's gross increased $171,849 in the first week in January.

November gross of the St. Louis-San Francisco system increased $1,801,254, while its gain in net operating income was $175,796. For eleven months gross increased $14,809,878, while net operating income decreased $4,890,058.

Sears-Roebuck Dividend

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Directors of Sears-Roebuck & Co. have declared a 2 per cent. quarterly dividend payable February 16 to holders of record January 31 in 6 per cent. scrip, redeemable on or before August 15, 1921.

RAIL AND STEEL ISSUES ARE UP

Oils Mixed as to Changes, Motors Steady, Coppers Improve and Leathers Decline

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

[illegible] were irregular in New York [illegible] the market quiet. Ga[illegible] and [illegible] averaged small and were [illegible] divided. Rails and Steels showed a little strength while [illegible] were mixed as to changes. Coppers [illegible] in the second hour. Leathers moved down. Tires [illegible].

First hour transactions aggregated about 300,000 shares. Call money opened at 6 per cent. Foreign Exchange rates showed small variations but demand sterling was a shade higher, opening at $3.73¾.

OFF AT THE OPENING.

Prices ruled lower at the opening but [illegible] losses averaged small and weakness was not pronounced. Almost every active stock was off [illegible] ever. The next movement was upward but it was not pronounced and [illegible] no more than to make the [illegible] irregular. It remained so during the first hour. The market, in fact, [illegible] and fixed. Hide and Leather preferred was the weakest issue up to the end of the morning. Its common [illegible]. Sears Roebuck soon [illegible] a two-point loss. Mexican Petroleum had an unusually narrow range. Crucible began with a small loss and was soon down more than two points. Southern Railway was an active carrier, advancing nearly a point. Most rails, excepting that issue, Reading and Northern Pacific were quiet. Both of the last two named advanced more than a point. Steels, oils and motors were [illegible] firm. Tires, barring [illegible], were weak. Goodrich dropped more than a point, and Kelly Springfield which sold ex-dividend, sagged three. Coppers were a shade lower. This was true of shipping shares. Cuba Cane was the only sugar to show a loss. There was less [illegible] in specialties than before this week.

ACCUMULATING STOCKS.

On every decline securities are being quietly absorbed and the character of this demand indicates that the market is getting support from big interests which are steadily accumulating stocks and bonds. This indicates belief in high quarters that from now on advancing prices may be expected. The market has rallied quickly this week after every bear onslaught. Selling pressure this morning was largely directed against issues which sold ex-dividend. Crucible was in this class. There was an easy recovery after declines. The undertone seemed good. Transactions in the stock loan market after the close of the exchange yesterday did not indicate that the short account is being extended to any great extent. Only a few stocks, including United Fruit and Sears-Roebuck, commanded a premium. Covering so far this year has been on a big scale. There is no question as to there being more confidence in banking and business circles.

STEEL TUBE BONDS WERE QUICKLY SOLD

The $10,000,000 sinking fund 7 per cent. gold bonds, series C, of the Steel & Tube Company of America offered by Dillon, Read & Company at 95¼ and interest have all been sold. The entire issue was taken at once. This is a tribute to their investment rating at a time when there are so many bargains on the market.

The Steel & Tube Company of America is one of the three largest manufacturers of steel pipe and other tubular steel goods in the United States. Its properties are self-contained and independent, the company owning and operating all units from raw material to finished product.

The general mortgage bonds are secured by a direct mortgage lien on the entire physical property of the company, having, after proper deductions, a value of approximately $64,000,000. An annual sinking fund will retire 3 1-3 per cent. annually of series C bonds by purchase at or below 107½ and interest, or call at that price. This sinking fund will retire the total amount of series C bonds by maturity.

Proceeds from the sale of these bonds will be utilized in redemption of the company's $5,000,000 three-year notes due July 1, 1921, and reimburse the company for expenditures made upon its properties.

Dividend Declarations

Atlas Powder Company declared quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. on preferred, payable February 1; books close January 20 and reopen February 1.

General Cigar Company declared quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on common, payable February 1 to holders of record January 24.

American District Telegraph Company declared quarterly dividend of 1 per cent, payable January 29 to holders of record January 15.

Elk Basin Petroleum Company declared quarterly dividends of 2 per cent. on common, payable January 15 to stock of record January 14 and 1¾ per cent. on preferred, payable February 1 to stock of record January 19.

Gillette Safety Razor Company declared quarterly dividend of $3 per share, payable March 1 to stock of record January 31.

New England Trust Company declared semi-annual dividend of 10 per cent, payable February 1 to stock of record January 1.

Penn Traffic Company declared semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent and extra dividend of 1 per cent., payable February 1 as registered January 15.

W. R. Grace & Company's Bank declared semi-annual dividend of 4 per cent., payable February 2 to holders of record January 25.

Cotton Markets

New York, Jan. 14.—Selling pressure from Wall street and the South was resumed in the early dealings of the cotton market and while first prices were 10 to 21 points higher, due to firm cables, they quickly lost the improvement and sold about 24 points under last night's close. To some extent the [illegible] the Census Bureau showing consumption of 294,851 running bales in December may have influenced the market and it was also affected by reports of large shipments from New Orleans. Notices of 2,100 bales were issued this morning. Covering rallied the market to last night's close but it again [illegible] settled and nervous at the end of twenty minutes. Opening prices were: January [illegible] bid; March 14.80; May 15.1[illegible]; July 15.[illegible]; September 16.25; October 16.23; December offered 16.25.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Wheat opened ¼c to 1 lower. Corn was ¼c lower to ¼c higher and oats were up ⅛c. Provisions started slow and a shade lower. Opening prices were: Wheat—March 1.78½ to 1.79; May, 1.69¼ to 1.70. Corn—May 74¾ to 74½; July 75¼ to 75¾. Oats—July, 48¾. Ribs—May, 12.80.

The Steel & Tube Company of America

General Mortgage Sinking Fund 7% Gold Bonds, Series C

Dated January 1, 1921 Due January 1, 1951

A sinking fund is provided which will retire 3⅓% annually of Series C Bonds by purchase at or below 107½ and interest or by call at that price. This sinking fund will retire the total amount of Series C Bonds by maturity.

Application will be made in due course to list on the New York Stock Exchange

Property—The Steel & Tube Company of America is one of the three largest manufacturers of steel pipe and other tubular steel goods in the United States. Its properties are self-contained and independent, the company owning and operating all the units from raw materials to the finished product.

Security—The General Mortgage Bonds, $16,000,000 outstanding, are secured by direct mortgage lien on the entire physical property of the company now owned or hereafter acquired, subject only to $9,578,812 obligations, all due in annual or semi-annual instalments, and outstanding under closed mortgages and indentures.

Equity—Followed by $17,500,000 7% Preferred Stock and 972,628 shares of Common Stock, representing an equity of approximately $67,000,000.

Earnings—The results of operations of the properties for the past five fiscal years have been as follows:

Year ended December 31	1920	1919	1918	1917	1916
Profits before deducting interest, Federal taxes and depreciation	$12,460,180	$5,969,912	$10,510,054	$9,103,383	$6,829,810
Annual interest on present prior obligations amounts to	584,849	584,849	584,849	584,849	584,849
	$11,875,331	$5,385,063	$9,925,205	$8,518,534	$6,244,961
Annual interest on $16,000,000 Gen'l Mortgage Bonds amounts to	$1,060,000

Price 95¼ and interest to yield approximately 7.40%

ORATORS IN BEST OF SHAPE

Vincent Martin Has Boils and Battle With Andy Chaney Had to Be Cancelled

JACK CONWAY.

The [illegible] who sold the cream and chocolate cars was the only one who secured any "break" at the Fenway A. A. show at Mechanics Building. He did a very successful business, while Announcer Jack Stafford, Boxing Commissioner Buckley and Eddie Meade engaged in a battle of oratory.

By this time it is probably known even in [illegible] Plain that Andy Chaney and Vincent (Pepper) Martin were [illegible] to clash in the feature contest of ten rounds. As it was a semi-final [illegible] the featherweight scramble some [illegible] fans were on hand to witness [illegible]

"They didn't fight" was the bright remark made by one friend Tom [illegible] as he was returning to the wilds of Quincy after the [illegible] men. [illegible] is a brief summary of what occurred during the course of the several hours that the assembled multitude kept warm by [illegible] various [illegible] and listening to [illegible] some good, some bad.

Martin was attacked by a flock of boils some three weeks ago but was of the opinion he still possessed enough strength to hand Chaney a thumping. When Pepper was examined by the Boxing Commission physician it was [illegible] was [illegible] Moreover he had a fever which [illegible] for a [illegible] to clout his way to the featherweight championship.

Disease Proved Infectious

Martin's fever apparently was of a contagious [illegible] as it spread through the [illegible]. It even nipped Stafford, Buckley, Meade, et al. who [illegible] making speeches.

'Twas only natural that an effort should be made to secure a substitute for Martin. Matchmaker [illegible] Green sought the services of Frankie (Young) Britt who is operating under the banner of [illegible] more [illegible] money he would have received as his share of the purse. Ray [illegible] has a lot of influence [illegible] behind his [illegible] features and decided that he would [illegible] better judgment if he held his warrior in check until he was in better condition. Ray made a few remarks about a Britt-Jackson match in New York as he bowed his way out of the dressing room meeting.

Artie O'Leary of New York, who is here to box Danny Frush at the Commonwealth [illegible] hopped into the picture. He didn't have any [illegible] to [illegible] Farrell broadside on Chaney's noble jaw. Eddie Meade, Chaney's manager, doesn't like the kind of [illegible] O'Leary [illegible] passed [illegible]

Frush's Name Fails to Enthuse Audience

[illegible] the [illegible] next [illegible] into [illegible] known that Danny Frush [illegible] self to [illegible] from a perfectly good [illegible] knew that they would [illegible] him. This announcement failed to bring forth any cheers from the Chaney camp. Some said it was because Frush once handed him a sound thumping. Others remarked it was because Meade doesn't [illegible] of the way Harris, Frush's manager, manicures his finger nails.

By this time the boys who keep the ticket takers busy were displaying little anxiety. Ice cream and chocolate bars don't usually arouse much enthusiasm but the fans were nevertheless able to make known the fact they wanted to know what was causing all the delay.

Announcer Stafford then stepped bravely forth and said that the examining physician had failed to pass Martin, but that Pepper was willing to fight.

Commissioner Buckley then stepped into the ring and charged the announcer with a misstatement. He asserted that Martin was in no condition to battle and that the commission didn't intend to let Chaney meet any set-up type of opponent. He added that Danny Frush was willing to meet Chaney and that the commission would approve such a quarrel. All of which brought forth cheers from the fans.

Meade Explains Chaney's Attitude

Eddie Meade then did a Daniel Webster and told how Chaney would meet anybody of his weight in the world, including Frush. Some cruel gent was then sent forth to awaken Daniel and bring him into the Arena. When Frush was weighed it was found he was above Chaney's weight and the fans hustled to nearby coffee houses so as to offset the effects of a lot of ice cream.

The Fenway Club announced that it would redeem all tickets at its office at No. 214 Washington street.

When Bat Nelson Won Crown

This is the [illegible] of a series of "[illegible]," written by authorities on pugilism in their day. [illegible]

The story today is of the knockout of Joe Gans by Battling Nelson, the fight that won the lightweight championship of the world for the [illegible] Dane. The battle was held in San Francisco, July 4, 1908, Bat putting over the finishing blow in the seventeenth round.

By R. A. (Bob) Smyth

Written for "Bat" Nelson's Life, Battles and Career."

The end of Gans' victorious career in the ring was pitifully dramatic, and for many the pleasure of Nelson's success was [illegible] by [illegible] that Gans could not have made a better stand. When the pace began to tell upon him he looked an old, old man. This was accentuated in his dressing room, where he gave way to his [illegible]. He had put his wonderful powers to the test once too often, and in a brief time all the honors of his career had been swept away.

Gans' heart seemed broken by the time he had gone eight rounds. At the end of the third round he told his seconds that he felt his strength slipping away from him. His nerve gave way completely in the sixteenth round when he had the palsy and he could not control himself.

Gans to the Floor Eight Times

Gans was either knocked down or went down to avoid punishment eight times in all during the fight. On a number of occasions he was just getting up as the timekeeper was about to count him out. As a matter of fact he was counted out twice [illegible] in the last round. The first time, owing to the tumult, Referee Jack Welsh did not hear the count of ten and the fight went on. The next time exhausted nature would not come to the relief of the old champion and he was unable to regain his feet.

Gans' frame was quivering convulsively when he came up for the sixteenth round as though he had a chill and medical men at the ringside said that this was an indication that he had lost his nerve. He held on to Nelson as soon as they came together and the latter peppered his body frequently with right and left. Nelson sent a hard right to the heart and soon had Gans in a corner. Gans tried a right to the head, but there was no steam behind the blow.

Nelson Slips Over Ropes

The seventeenth and last round found Nelson spurred on to the greatest efforts as he knew the end of the fight was close at hand. He sent a right to the head and followed this up with a jarring uppercut. Gans rushed Nelson to the ropes and the Dane slipped back out of the ring, being half supported by the lower rope, which caught him around the leg. Gans fell over him putting a severe strain on the Dane.

The latter was up without any delay and attacked Gans viciously, rushing him across the ring and Gans went down on his side, being partly wrestled down and partly hit. He was down on his haunches a moment afterward and stayed almost for the full limit of ten seconds. When he stood up Nelson sent a hard right to the jaw, and this time Gans stayed down for the full count.

Boston Hockey Teams in League Games

When the B. A. A. and Boston Shoe Trades Club swing into action in the United States Amateur Hockey League series tomorrow night local fans will have a chance to judge the prospects of the Boston team for the championship of the country.

B. A. A. plays St. Nicholas of New York at the Boston Arena tomorrow night and Shoe Trades tackles Quaker City at Philadelphia.

If [illegible] the [illegible] from Philadelphia to Quebec and Montreal for games Monday and Tuesday.

The St. Nicks' forward line will present a mixture of Canadian, Yale and St. Paul School hockey tactics. Ray [illegible] is the [illegible] captain [illegible] Canadian star. He teamed up with the late Hobey Baker a few years ago [illegible] was in the British flying service during the war and met with a severe [illegible] ey playing [illegible] the [illegible] jury.

Old Yale Stars in St. Nick's Line

F[illegible] the old Yale captain and Barew[illegible] another former Eli will be [illegible] St. Nick's [illegible] well the old St. Nick's [illegible] St. Paul's [illegible]

The B. A. A. will have to show better passing than it did against Harvard varsity Wednesday. The Unicorn men have the ability but have contracted that league's habit of hogging the puck. Ralph Winsor who assisted Manager Kanaly at Tuesday's practice gave the B. A. A. players a stiff talk after the Harvard defeat and it is expected that the team will show a better brand of hockey against the St. Nicks tomorrow night.

JACK DEMPSEY TO BOX FORMER PARTNER

Captain Richmond and his English High School swimming team will journey to Worcester Academy tomorrow. The Worcester boys are a fast team and English will have its hands full to bring home a victory. Nevertheless the Blue and Blue natators are in excellent condition for the meet and expect to make a better showing than last year.

PORTLAND HOCKEY TEAM TRIMS TUFTS

Portland, Me., Jan. 14.—Portland Country Club defeated the Tufts College seven 8 to 2. The clubmen shot seven goals in the first two periods. The Tufts seven made a big brace in the last period, and although unable to score, held Portland to one goal.

SOMERVILLE CAPTAIN DEFEATS OWN TEAM

Danvers, Jan. 14.—After stopping a hard shot from Hero Connolly, captain of St. John's, early in the opening period Captain Garrett of Somerville High accidentally shot the puck into his own goal for the only point of the game.

Colgate Wins

CARLSON TO BOX PETE HARTLEY

Boys Will Travel Over Twelve-Round Route at Providence Legion Post Show

Providence, Jan. 14.—Harry Carlson of Brockton and Pete Hartley of New York will meet in the main bout of twelve rounds at the boxing bout to be staged at Infantry Hall tonight by Providence Post, American Legion. Hartley, who has appeared here many times, is particularly popular with the fans.

The semi-final will be a ten-round mill between Frankie Ryan and Buddy Dolan of Pawtucket. This bids fair to be a slashing battle. Ryan has been going exceptionally well lately and Dolan is a tough rival for anyone in his class. Young Kansas of South Providence will swap punches with Young Murray of New Bedford and Freddie Welch of Pawtucket and Young Donahue of Woonsocket will also mingle.

NEWBURYPORT FIVE BEATS BROOKLINE A. A.

Newburyport, Jan. 14.—Newburyport's basketball team defeated the Brookline A. A., 33 to 36, in a hard fought game.

Who Is to Blame?

The Martin-Chaney fight fizzled—why?

Somebody pulled a bone. And the local fans, who dug deep for their little $1.20, $2.20 or $3.30, expecting to see a first-class bout, but were "taken" in, would like to know the inside workings.

The refund offer by the club does not appeal to the boys—they went to see a fight—but the best they saw was the sorry spectacle of promoters, managers, referees and a member of the Boxing Board, falling all over themselves passing the buck in an effort to get from under.

If Martin had boils—these did not develop between bouts—surely it was no secret.

It was up to the well-known Boxing Board to call off the entire card of festivities—they alone had the power.

In the old days these eleventh-hour shifts were not unusual, but with the sport now under the eagle eyes of a commission, last evening's little fiasco demands a thorough investigation.

DUFTON AND SOUTAR WIN AT COURT TENNIS

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.—Rowland Dufton of the Boston Tennis and Racquet Club defeated Joe Mills, while Jack Soutar, the world champion, won from Otto Glocker of Boston in the United States court tennis championship tournament in progress at the Racquet Club. The Dufton-Moss match went to five sets.

ST. MARK'S CLUB TO DINE GRID HEROES

St. Mark's Catholic Club of Dorchester at its headquarters at No. 164 Ashmont street will tender a banquet to last year's successful football team, which went through the season with one of the hardest football schedules it has ever had and came out on the winning end, next Tuesday night.

GARRISON FINISH WINS FOR B. C.

Tech Hockey Team Goes Down in a 4 to 3 Defeat at Boston Arena

Boston College, by a Garrison finish, defeated Tech, 4 to 3, in a hockey game in the Boston Arena. The Engineers showed some clever handling of the puck and a good defense, especially in the first half, but the Maroon and Gold sextet came to life with a rush in the second half, when an individual dash by Garrity and some fine teamwork by Captain Hughes and Frank Morrissey overcame Tech's one-point lead and gave B. C. victory.

The net guardian, O'Brien of B. C. and Nickle of Tech, did brilliant work. The former was caught napping on a couple of shots in the opening half, but shone as the game progressed, not a shot getting by him in the second period.

As a result of the contest B. C. is due to meet Williams in two weeks at the Boston rink.

The lineup.

PURVES STAR IN 'AD' PLAY

Woodland Member Meets Hamilton of Garden City in Final Match Today

Pinehurst, N. C., Jan. 14.—R. Murray Purves of the Woodland Golf Club of Boston met Lou Hamilton of Garden City today in the final round of the Winter Golf League of Advertising Interests tournament.

Purves was the favorite as the Boston golfer is rated a number of shots better than Hamilton although the Garden City man is a regular Pinehurst visitor and understands the tricky roll of the close-cut fairways and sand greens much better than his rival.

The New York delegation is quite disturbed because of the easy manner in which Purves advanced to the final round. With 15 out of the 16 to survive the first round Metropolitan golfers, the Broadway boys considered they had the tournament all sewed up. They have been backing their men against the Woodland golfer all week.

Practically all of the Advertisers are high handicap golfers, but they possess a wonderful line of low handicap gossip. A twenty-four handicap man from Exmoor, Chicago, told a group about the clubhouse fireside today that he got four birdies in one round.

HAVEMEYER CAPTAIN OF HARVARD TRAP SHOOTERS

Charles Havemeyer, the varsity football centre, has been elected captain of the Harvard trap shooting team. In addition he has been chosen president of the Harvard Gun Club. The trap shooters start work next month on Soldiers Field.

TOMMY WOODS, FOOTBALL HERO, GETS DEGREE SOON

Tommy Woods, who was picked as All-America centre by Walter Camp, is to leave Harvard in two weeks. He will be given a degree in mid-year.

Johnny Leonard to Battle Green

Johnny Leonard, sensational Allentown featherweight, will meet "Irish Billy" Green, featherweight champion of the Middle West, in a ten-round bout at Marlboro tonight. Jimmy (Young) Sacco, who was originally booked to meet Green, withdrew from the contest on account of a cut over one of his eyes. Matchmaker Jack Murphy was mighty fortunate in securing the services of Leonard who recently beated Jimmy Sullivan of Worcester. The Allentown warrior is a good boxer and stiff puncher and is sure to make things interesting for the Chicago fighter.

England May Stage Big Bout for the Title

By FORBES W. FAIRBAIRN.

London, Jan. 14.—Rumors that the British government would not allow the Dempsey-Carpentier fight to be staged in England were definitely quashed today by C. B. Cochran, who, with Tex Rickard and William A. Brady, is promoting the championship contest. For weeks the London papers have been full of long articles telling in great detail why. In the first place, the fight will never come off, and if it does, it will not be here.

"Dempsey and Carpentier are more than anxious to fight," said Cochran. "They will fight wherever we tell them to or they both forfeit moneys advanced, which is more than 250,000 francs in the case of Carpentier.

"Jack Kearns does not refuse to fight his champion in England, as I have read. There is no written clause in the contract to this effect, but he has told us, singly and collectively, that he has no objections to fighting there providing his side was paid in dollars, the same amount that is stated in the contract. Of course, that is a fairly difficult thing to do, on account of the present unfavorable exchange between New York and London.

"Carpentier would just as soon fight in London as anywhere. He has told me that time and again, and so has his manager, Descamps. I have a sight for a great covered arena seating 70,000 under option, and am willing to build. In case the fight does come here the prices will be from $7 per seat to $70, or from £2 to £20 at the present exchange rates.

"And you can also take it from me that Carpentier is more than convinced that he can whip Jack Dempsey. Personally I don't care to express my opinion because I have never seen Dempsey in action but the Frenchman has, and I consider him a fairly good judge of another fighter's merits. And after that puzzling exhibition Dempsey made against Brennan, I don't know but that Georges has some grounds for being so confident.

B. C. FIVE WINS BY A POINT

Eddie O'Donnell of Springfield Y. M. C. A. College Is the Individual Star

A margin of one point gave the Boston College basketball team a victory over the Springfield Y. college five at the Boston Normal School gym. The final score stood 34 to 33.

"MY voice?" queried Jerry.

"I place it now," said Kenneth. "Remember that night out at Silver Bluffs when you played with my windpipe? You said you were Jennie's cousin."

"Don't remember anything about any such time. But I'm not her cousin."

The strange, drawn look Jennie had worried over in Kenneth's face was now no longer there. His face was working. His next words came out as a sharp explosion

"I'm not!" Jerry cried huskily.

"My father!" breathed Jennie.

Kenneth turned upon Jennie. And then the possible danger that had been hidden in the heart of all these years—the fear that had eaten her soul all these weeks and days—suddenly burst into all the terrors of actuality. The heavens opened and all they sustained and contained, crashed down upon her.

"Yes, your father—Black Jerry Malone!" Kenneth said rapidly, his words fairly snapping into her very face with feverish distinctness.

"And you're Jennie Malone—you were never anybody else! And I know you used to be clever at forging—and I know about your trial—and that you ran away to escape sentence for forgery!"

Jennie swayed and would have fallen had not a blindly outstretched hand gripped the back of the chair. She stared with wide eyes at Kenneth. So—the very end had come! The end to all her years of striving—to her dreams and to her father's dreams—and she was falling dizzily down—down—down—from her brilliant pinnacle! All, all was over!

She did not speak. Dazedly, limply, she waited for the furious denunciation which she had known would be her portion if ever this moment came.

But there came no tongue-lashing—there fell no furious blow. Jennie caught her breath. Bewildered, she gazed at Kenneth; [illegible] gazed back at her, panting a bit, his eyes agleam with a new excitement of which she now for the first time became aware

For a moment there was complete silence. Then Black Jerry pushed squarely up in front of Kenneth

"If you try anything on my Jennie," he growled, "I'll twist that neck of yours the same as I said I would!"

"Father, don't!" breathed Jennie. "What's the use?" and then to Kenneth. "Yes, I've known for a long time that you either knew or else suspected."

"But I have not!" he exclaimed.

"No?" she cried incredulously. "But the strange way you looked at me these weeks——"

"Ask your father to go, Jennie," Kenneth interrupted. "There's a lot I want to say to you."

"Since you know who Jennie is, and all that's all over, I stick right here so long as she needs me," Black Jerry replied.

"All right then," said Kenneth in a hurried, eager tone, turning away from Back Jerry. "Jennie, I never dreamed that you were anything except what I'd always supposed—not until today."

"No! But—but the strange looks I saw—"

"Listen, Jennie!" He spoke with a rapidity and a feverish agitation she had never in all her acquaintance with him known the self-controlled Kenneth to show. "If you saw a strange look, it was because I was wondering what you'd do when you learned the truth!"

"What I'd do?" she exclaimed.

I've Been Living in Hell

"Jennie, I've been living in hell!" he went on rapidly, heedless of Black Jerry—and what was now amazing her most was a pleading tone that had come into his voice. "You know a little about my fooling with war stocks, but you have no idea how deep I've gone into them. I've put in everything I had—and more! It was the chance of a lifetime to make a big killing—to come out of it established forever as one of the big men who count. I went into it on margins, Jennie—and once started I had to keep on or I'd have been wiped out. Besides, I'm sure to clean up big in the end. Sure! So when my money was all gone—I began to use Shipman's money to cover my margins. But the market didn't rise, and I was every day afraid that I'd be found out—that's why I looked that way at you."

"Oh!" Jennie breathed faintly.

"And today I got a tip that the bank examiners would probably be around tomorrow," he went on with mounting excitement. "I'm up against it, Jennie! I've got to make good by tomorrow what I've used—or—or—you understand! You're the only person who can save me!"

"Yes, only you, Jennie! The idea came to me this afternoon after I had learned who you really were." He drew several slips of paper from an inner pocket and his words tumbled on. "These are Harrison & Company checks—the extra ones for use in case any are spoiled. We're holding a lot of money in our bank that we won't have to use for a month or two. I've made out one of these checks for fifty thousand and signed it as treasurer—you know I'm still treasurer there—but it's got to be countersigned by my father as president. If that check [illegible] father's signature, I can get the money to straighten out my accounts in the morning over at Shipman's. And then I'll make my clean-up—the market is absolutely sure to turn [illegible] in a few days or a week or two—and then I'll deposit the fifty thousand back into the account of Harrison & Company before it's missed and everything will be all right! All I ask of you, Jennie, is just to sign my father's name. Here's a sample of his signature. It looks hard—I couldn't do it—but for you it will be easy! Jennie, you'll do it for me, won't you?"

"Kenneth!" she breathed staring. She was utterly dumfounded by this turn of events. She had feared so long this day and its denunciation. And now, exposure had come—and instead of denunciation, of being cast into outer darkness, here was Kenneth pleading that she should forge for his sake. The contrast was too astounding; for the moment her brain could not function.

"Don't you see, Jennie," he argued feverishly—"all that it amounts to is that I have borrowed from Shipman, and that I'll just be borrowing from my own firm to pay Shipman, and that in a short time I can square things with my own firm. That's all there is to it—just borrowing!" He pushed her, unresistingly, down into the chair at her writing table and laid the checks before her. "And here—I brought along one of the pens my father always uses. And here's some blank paper. Just practice his signature a few times."

Black Jerry, who had remained silent and aside during all this, now stepped forward.

"Hold on, Jennie," he ordered. He fixed his dark eyes on Kenneth. "You, young man, you ain't said yet what you're going to do about Jennie. Before Jennie goes ahead, we want a few words from you on that point. I ain't just got your number yet. Are you going to tell what you learned about her and throw Jennie down? Or are you going to keep still and stand by her?"

"Stand by her, of course!" cried Kenneth. "To expose her and start talk—I guess you can see that wouldn't help me a lot. Hurry [illegible] Jennie!"

"Hold on," Black Jerry repeated, his dark eyes still on Kenneth. He considered an instant. In Black Jerry's mind, true product of his world, there was little concern over those details of human conduct which laws denominate as crimes—though Jerry, as conduct went among his fellows had really been a very law-abiding citizen. A more important consideration than law according to Jerry's code, was doing what was right and square by one's friends.

"You'd better understand what's behind this business," he said with his grim, ferocious pride. "I felt my Jennie had a right to as big a chance as any other girl. So I fixed things to give her that chance. And she's made good all right; woman to woman, there's no woman in her class. She deserves to be up where she is. So if you don't stand by her, I'll get you—don't you forget that! Go ahead, Jennie."

Jennie's chief sense was that of escape when escape had seemed impossible. Her relief was too vast for her to have thought of what she had been asked to do or of its consequences. She took the pen from Kenneth and mechanically began to copy the signature of the elder Harrison upon the practice sheet. Kenneth watched her, wiping his face in his manner the nervous relief of one who has won salvation; Jerry eyed, now Kenneth, now her. The room was still save for the breathing of the three. Jennie's hand grew more steady; the natural skill which had been hers when long ago she had forged that Morrison check, and which had been hers more recently when she had successfully imitated Gloria's handwriting, now returned to her. When Kenneth placed before her the check already filled out and signed by him, she wrote "James Harrison" as well as Kenneth's father could have done it himself.

"There!" she breathed, pushing the check toward Kenneth.

He seized it. "Thank God!" he cried. "Jennie—you'll never know what you've done for me!"

"You'd better remember, and keep on remembering!" put in Black Jerry, his dark, lowering face clenched with menace. "And also you'd better remember to treat my Jennie square—or you'll get what's coming to you." Abruptly he picked up his cabinet-maker's bag. "So-long," he said, and walked out of the room.

"You've done it all—you've saved everything! . . . But—but—Jennie, don't think I don't appreciate it if I run away and leave you. I promised to see my broker this evening before dinner, and I've simply got to go."

The next moment she was alone. She sank weakly into a chair, still holding the pen, almost in a state of collapse. She had escaped! She was safe! The future was still her own!

Why a Ship Sinks to the Bottom of the Sea

By Garrett P. Serviss,

Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest.

THE following question is dated from the U S Naval Torpedo Station at Newport

"If a ship or any piece of metal sank below the surface of the ocean would the depth to which it sank alter the buoyancy, or in other words, would there be any certain depth at which it would be suspended between the surface and the bottom?"

It would sink to the bottom because the density of the material is greater than the density of water in the densest state in which it exists, even at the bottom of the sea. That is to say, a piece of any kind of metal is heavier than an equal volume of water, and continues to be heavier as it goes down, notwithstanding the very slight increase that the density, or relative weight of the water experiences in consequence of the enormous pressure at great depths. The co-efficient of compression of water, i. e. the decrease per unit volume, is only about one-twenty-thousandth for each increase of one atmosphere of pressure. At a depth of one mile this would produce an increase of only about one one-hundred-and-thirtieth in the density, or weight, of a cubic foot of water, although the pressure at that depth would be about a ton and a quarter to the square inch. It is not the absolute pressure of the water that prevents a body from sinking, but the relative weight of the water, bulk for bulk, to the weight of the body, at the same pressure, or at the same depth.

As long as a cubic foot or cubic inch of the water weighs more than a cubic foot or cubic inch of the submerged body the body will continue to sink. The only way to prevent this is by making the body hollow, so that it will displace a greater weight of water than would a solid body of the same material. The legend that sunken ships hover halfway down the ocean depths has no warranty. Such a thing might be if water were as compressible as air or if the oceans were a couple of hundred miles deep.

"Will you explain why or what caused the earth to take an elliptical course around the sun? Is it due to unequal attraction or otherwise? When it starts to leave the circular course what prevents it continuing still farther off its course?—W. S, Elmhurst, N. Y."

We are left largely to conjecture as to what originally set the earth in motion. The [illegible] unknown and perhaps unknowable. But if we confine our attention to accounting for the paths which the earth or other bodies in the solar system now pursue there is no mathematical difficulty in the way.

The earth travels around the sun in an elliptical orbit because at the "initial moment" its velocity of motion with respect to the sun had a certain value with relation to the distance between them and to their combined attractive force, which velocity was less than the velocity that the attractive force of the sun would impart to a body falling from an infinite distance to the distance of the earth.

This latter velocity is called "the parabolic velocity" because if the earth had started moving with a velocity just equal to this particular velocity, it would have traveled not in an ellipse around the sun, but in a parabola, which would have carried it just once to a certain point of nearest approach to the sun, after which it would have passed away into space never to return.

If the earth, at the initial moment, had started moving at right angle to the direction of he sun, and with a velocity equal to the parabolic velocity multiplied by the square root of ½. It would have traveled not in an ellipse but in a circle. I say not in an ellipse because popularly an ellipse is supposed to have an elongated, or oval form; but in reality a circle is simply a particular case of the ellipse.

If the earth, at the initial moment, had had a velocity greater than the parabolic velocity, then, instead of travelling in an ellipse a circle, or parabola, it would have travelled in a hyperbola, and in that case, too it would have simply paid its respects to the sun and then have turned its back upon him forever, going off to make other temporary acquaintances among the stars.

Nevertheless, the shape of the hyperbola is very different from that of the parabola. It is well to add that it is doubtful if a single case of a true parabolic orbit exists in the universe, because calculation shows that the chance of any planet starting with exactly the parabolic velocity is infinitely small. Comets are sometimes said to travel in parabolic orbits, but that is only a convenient fiction.

But, while an initial velocity less than the parabolic velocity imposes upon a planet the necessity of travelling in an elliptic orbit, yet the precise form and size of the ellipse depend upon the precise velocity, and the direction in which the initial motion is made with respect to the sun.

If this seems no answer to your question, don't be discouraged, but take up the fascinating study of elementary mathematical astronomy.

Running Things

By Aline Michaelis

EXECUTIVE ability is an amazing thing, for if you have it you can be the boss behind the king. It looks so fine [illegible] said boss there's never been a dearth of folks who'd gladly come across and run [illegible] whole round earth. But, since the earth is going good without their kindly aid, at home they make it understood their word must be obeyed. These little tyrants get their folks to trembling at their step; they make them bow beneath their yokes and rob them of their pep. I don't think that tyrants all belong on history's yellowed page, they keep on coming right along in every race and age. Old Nero did the stunt up brown, but I would have you know that tyrants dwell in my home town who make his record slow. They do not work for what is right nor root for what is best; but, careless of another's plight, they knock him galley-west. Executive ability is where they shine, they say; they know just how things ought to be and want them run their way.

Did as He Was Told

A gentleman who had been stopping at a big hotel upon entering a taxi to go to the station discovered that he had left a small box behind. Calling one of the pageboys he told him to go to room 97 as quickly as he could and see if he had left a small box on the dresser, and to hurry, as the train went in five minutes. The boy rushed up the stairs, and was back in two minutes, all out of breath. "Yes, sir," he panted, "you left it, sir."

Anecdotes of the Famous

Among the curious characters met by Mr E F Benson, the author of "Dodo" and other brilliant works, was the eccentric Mr. J. E. Nixon, Dean of King's College, Cambridge.

Nixon was an odd man, a little over five feet tall, with an artificial right hand. In spite of this he played tennis, nestling the ball in the crook of his arm, and then, by a dexterous jerk of his body, flinging it into the air and serving it.

He would argue about the most casual topic.

"If you said, 'It's a fine day,'" says Mr Benson in his reminiscences, "Our Family Affairs," he cleared his throat raspingly, and said, 'It all depends on what you mean by fine. If you mean sun and a blue sky, granted, but why shouldn't you call it fine if there are buckets of rain falling? A fish, now'——

"'Very well; but I say "fish" I'm a fish and you're a fish. To a fish probably, the wetter it is the finer it is, and there you are.'"

The wit of Sir Francis Burnand was as spontaneous as it was inexhaustible.

"Ah," said the stranger, "I see you don't know me from Adam."

"My dear fellow," was the reply, "I didn't know Adam."

Quickly Defined.

Schoolmaster: "I have an impression in my head. Now, can any one boy tell me the meaning of Impression?" Small boy: "Yes, please, sir. An impression is a dent in a soft place."

THE gentle but unmistakable pressure of her hand he interpreted as the pinning on him of the badge of her faith. He was to go into battle wearing her colors. Their eyes met.

"I'm afraid, Mr. Langmaid," the rector replied, "that it would take me longer to tell you than the time at your disposal."

"Dear me," said the lawyer, "this is too bad. Why didn't you come to me? I am a good friend of yours, Hodder, and there is an additional bond between us on my sister's account. She is extremely fond of you, you know. And I have a certain feeling of responsibility for you—I brought you here."

"You have always been very kind, and I appreciate it," Hodder replied. "I should be sorry to cause you any worry or annoyance. But you must understand that I cannot share the responsibility of my acts with any one."

"A little advice from an old legal head is sometimes not out of place. Even Dr. Gilman used to consult me. I hope you will bear in mind how remarkably well you have been getting along at St. John's, and what a success you've made."

"Assuredly," he answered benignly. "You have managed to please everybody, Mr. Parr included—and some of us are not easy to please. I thought I'd tell you this, as a friend, as your first friend in the parish. Your achievement has been all the more remarkable, following, as you did, Dr. Gilman. Now it would greatly distress me to see that state of things disturbed, both for your sake and others. I thought I would just give you a hint, as you are going to see Mr. Parr, that he is in rather a nervous state. These so-called political reformers have upset the market and started a lot of legal complications—that's why I'm here tonight. Go easy with him. I know you won't do anything foolish."

The lawyer accompanied this statement with a pat, but this time he did not succeed in concealing his concern

"That depends on one's point of view," Mr. Hodder returned, with a smile. "I do not know how you have come to suspect that I am going to disturb Mr. Parr, but what I have to say to him is between him and me."

"Drop in on me sometime," he said, "I'd like to talk to you."

Hodder heard a voice behind him, and turned. A servant was standing there

"Mr. Parr is ready to see you, sir," he said

The rector followed him up the stairs, to the room on the second floor, half office, half study, where the capitalist transacted his business when at home.

"How are you, Mr. Hodder? I'm sorry to have kept you waiting, but matters of some legal importance have arisen on which I was obliged to make a decision. You're well, I hope." He shot a glance at the rector, and sat down again, still holding the sheets. "If you will excuse me a moment longer, I'll finish this."

"Certainly," Hodder replied.

Hodder sat down, and the banker resumed his perusal of the document, his eye running rapidly over the pages, pausing once in a while to scratch out a word or to make a note on the margin. In the concentration of the man on the task before him the rector read a design, an implication that the affairs of the Church were of a minor importance; sensed, indeed, the new attitude of hostility, gazed upon the undiscovered side, the dangerous side before which other men had quailed. Alison's words recurred to him, 'they are afraid of you, they will crush you if they can.' Eldon Parr betrayed, at any rate, no sign of fear. If his mental posture were further analyzed, it might be made out to contain an intimation that the rector, by some act, had forfeited the right to the unique privilege of the old relationship

Well, the fact that the banker had, in some apparently occult manner, been warner, would make Hodder's task easier—or rather less difficult. His feelings were even more complicated than he had anticipated. The moments of suspense were trying to his nerves, and he had a shrewd notion that this making men wait was a favorite manoeuvre of Eldon Parr's; nor had he underated the benumbing force of that personality.

AN ABSORBING STORY OF UP-TO-DATE AMERICA

CHAPTER XL.

WHEN Mortimer Lawrence escorted his mother and sister home after the dance he did not say good night at once.

"I want to have a little talk alone with you here," he told Irene.

Irene hesitated. "But it's late," she demurred, "and the sound of our voices will keep mother awake."

"Tomorrow is Sunday, and mother can sleep late," was the terse rejoinder.

"Did you stop here on your way to the dance and tell one of the maids to prepare a room for you?" Irene asked irrelevantly. She was desirous of postponing the hour of reckoning or of explanation

Her brother smiled ironically. "Certainly I stopped here on my way to the dance. If you would exercise your usual perspicacity, my dear sister, you would realize that I hardly travelled all the way up from New York in evening dress."

Irene flushed with vexation, then asked suspiciously, "What decided you to come on to Newport so suddenly? We were not expecting you at all."

Again this answer was ironical. "Can you ask me what brings me to Newport when you are here?"

She frowned. "I wish you would talk sense, Mortimer."

Mrs. Lawrence interposed to prevent the quarrel she feared was pending.

"Dear children, why stand in the hall arguing? Come into the drawing room. I will be glad to get you some cake and wine before I retire, dear Mortimer, if you would like it."

Her son shook his head. "No, thank you. I ate all I wanted at the dance. Won't you join Irene and me in our little confab? I shall not detain either of you very long."

The Need to Work

Mrs. Lawrence hesitated. Curiosity and anxiety moved her to remain.

"Well, if you are not going to talk, I may as well stay downstairs," she said. "Especially as I heard you say you must return to New York tomorrow, and I shall have you here such a short time. What takes you back so quickly?"

"Some business that I must attend to on Monday morning."

"I hardly think so," the man replied. "I was up at camp for almost a month, you know, and am [illegible]ly to settle down to work."

His mother eyed him gravely. "Why are you so much more industrious than you used to be, son?" she queried

"Yes," Irene broke in, "what is your idea? You used to take at least six weeks off every Summer."

"I know it," Mortimer admitted. "When I was at college I felt I had a right to loaf. Now that I am in business with father it is different. He is still up in the Adirondacks, anyway, as you know. By the way, mother, I may as well speak plainly. I am needed at the office. Father is neglecting things. Not that I blame him. He is no longer young, and he trusts too much to others.

"But all this is a matter that need not concern you two. What I especially want to ask you, Irene, is what you meant by the remark you made to Miss Throckmorton tonight. You spoke as if she were—engaged."

"As I was authorized—or at least justified—in doing by Lewis Sheldon."

Mortimer eyed her keenly. "Did Sheldon tell you that Miss Throckmorton was engaged to him?"

Irene regarded the beaded tip of her slipper and spoke indifferently. "Well, he did not say—'I am the happiest man in the world—she has consented to be mine?'" she sneered. "But he did admit to Reginald Haight and me that there was some understanding between them—speaking of her as 'Mary' and saying, as if he owned her, that she was so tired that he must take her home.

"Anyway"—with a defiant toss of the head—"there is no need of their announcing their engagement. If they are not engaged, they ought to be!

A Sharp Retort

"Only a few hours ago I overheard her talking to him of the number of men who had asked her to dance, of her popularity, and so on, with a freedom that no girl would use to anyone except the man to whom she was engaged or married.

"It is all very well for a girl to boast to her betrothed of her conquests—if good taste does not prevent it—but it does sound rather foolish to the bystander."

"Who need not listen unless she wishes to!" Lawrence declared hotly. "Do I understand that you and Haight overheard all this conversation you are repeating?"

"You may understand anything you like!" his sister retorted sharply. "The facts are that Mary, with that strident Western voice of hers, was talking so loudly that anyone who was not near the orchestra could have heard her. Fortunately, she and Sheldon and Reginald and I were the only people at that end of the room. I will do her the justice to admit that she did not seem to see us until after she had finished telling her fiance how popular she is."

Mrs. Lawrence spoke hastily. "I would not talk like that, Irene, even of Mary Throckmorton. Of course, she is not our kind, and I am glad that she is to marry a man who can lift her from her early environment. Yet, do be more charitable, dear daughter."

She started nervously as her son arose and stood tall and straight in front of her.

The Adventures of Ann

By Hal Coffman

CHAPTER LXIV.

WHEN Ann finally realized that the revolutionists meant to keep her prisoner she resolved to bide her time and take advantage of the first opportunity to escape. The big man with the black beard—whom the others addressed as "Your Excellency," and evidently the leader—assured Ann that no harm would come to her as long as she did not try to get away.

"But surely you will let me send word to my family, so they won't worry over my absence?" she asked him.

"That will be attended to at once," he assured her. Then he asked her address and, after some words in Spanish to the other man, they left the room, leaving Gomez to watch over her. The woman was very sympathetic and told Ann how sorry she was it had happened, but their future was at stake and her husband had insisted she be held until their plans had matured.

"You shall have everything you wish, and I will look after you myself," the woman told her.

As the woman left the room Gomez chuckled. "I did not think that my chance for revenge would come so soon, Miss Sheridan," he remarked.

Ann, however, paid no attention to him. She was so busy trying to devise some scheme of escape that his stealthy movements toward her went unnoticed until he suddenly put his arms around her and kissed her.

"I said I kissed you once before, but now I've actually done it" he laughed, as he held her in his arms.

Ann said nothing, but her right fist shot up and landed between his eyes. It sent him reeling, and Ann jumped to the window, raised it hurriedly and screamed. There was no one on the street, and before she could attract attention a strong hand in back of her jerked her backward and banged the window.

WARSHIP IN NEW ROLE—The camera man has stolen a glimpse of the U. S. S. Kearsarge at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. The Kearsarge is being stripped of her armor and other war fittings and is capable of lifting 250 tons. The Kearsarge will be the largest crane in the world and will proceed from port to port. The largest 16-inch gun turret weighs more than 200 tons and is too heavy for most cranes. (c) Underwood & Underwood.

SOME OF OUR WILDEST GEESE—In Continental Europe, goose races are common events. New York and other breeders have been busy for the past few months training their running geese for this annual event. The photograph shows, left to right, Miss Margie Hyman, Miss Dorothy MacKail, Miss Olga Zicova and Miss Mildred Mann, four of the best and fairest of the web-footed coursers. (c) U. & U.

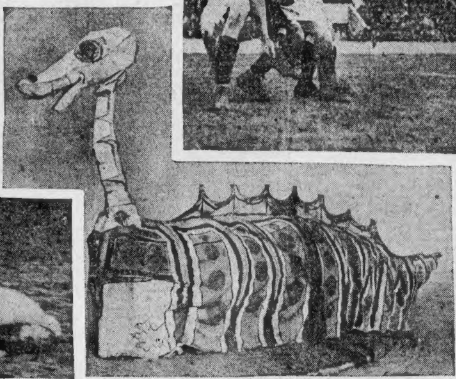
HOW TO BEAT THE "FLU"—The medicine man of the Ibes, one of our best little tribes in Southern Nigeria, Africa, is shown here garbed in his finest with all his stock in trade close at hand. The Ibes are 4,000,000 in number and half-civilized. (Int.)

FOOTBALL ON THE CONTINENT—Those who think the English are the only devotees of Rugby and soccer are mistaken. Photograph shows a splendid moment in a game between the Portugese and Spanish teams at the stadium in Paris. (Wide World.)

NOT "IN THE BAG"—This photograph, taken during the recent "Thames Steeplechase" in England, shows Jocky Canty taking a spill off of Impressioner. We would say that Impressioner was one of the finest "impressionistic" horses in the country. We opine that Canty thinks so, inasmuch as he has had a wonderful impression made on his collar bone (Wide World.)



GUSSIE HAS SOME SIZE—At a recent Art Ball at South Kensington branch of the Royal College of Art, in England, the above startling animal appeared. It turned out to be a dozen students. (Wide World.)

ONE OF THE BEST FIGHTERS—Captain Erich Von Salzmann of the Germany Army fought with us in the boxer rebellion. Also in Boer War. With Germany in World War. On way to Japan for German paper. (c) U. & U.

HERE'S A DEAD SORT OF JOB—A well-known casket company is showing burial gowns of various charming designs. Live models are used for the demonstration. The "samples" are "laid out" and members of the w.k. profession look them over. The gown shown in the above picture seems to have been a bit short for the model, but we will wager that the visiting undertakers were well satisfied that it was a work of art. The young lady with the lonesome rose doesn't seem so blamed sad, either. (c) U. & U.

CUTTING OUT NEXT SUMMER'S DIAMONDS—While the coalman is being properly made the chief target of we members of the common herd now, Mr. Ice Man will come in for the heavy insults next Summer. He is now engaged up North cutting his way and also his fortune across the frozen lakes of Maine. Keep an eye on the ice man. He will be after the w.k. family pocket book next. (c) Keystone.

CAME TOO LATE—Some enterprising shoe dealer has brought out a set of skid chains for bipeds, mostly women folks. We can remember the good old days when we could have sold them to most every member of the old [illegible] out West on any day. But Andy Volstead has put the crimp in any monetary aspirations of the inventive genius who brought forth that idea. (c) Underwood & Underwood.

ENRICH YOUR BLOOD

With organic iron—Nuxated Iron—it's like the iron in your blood and the iron in spinach, lentils and apples—will not blacken or injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. Entirely different from metallic iron. It quickly helps put strength into your muscles and color into your cheeks. Get your doctor to make your red blood count today, then take Nuxated Iron for a few weeks and watch your red blood corpuscles increase; see how much purer and richer your blood becomes; how much stronger and better you feel; what a difference it makes in your nerves. Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. Your money will be refunded if you do not obtain satisfactory results. In tablet form only. At all druggists.

"DANDERINE"

Girls! Save Your Hair! Make It Abundant!

Immediately after a "Danderine" massage, your hair takes on new life, lustre and wondrous beauty, appearing twice as heavy and plentiful, because each hair seems to fluff and thicken. Don't let your hair stay lifeless, colorless, plain or scraggly. You, too, want lots of long, strong, beautiful hair.

A 35-cent bottle of delightful "Danderine" freshens your scalp, checks dandruff and falling hair. This stimulating "beauty-tonic" gives to thin, dull, fading hair that youthful brightness and abundant thickness.—All druggists!

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

FIND ERRORS IN TAX RETURNS

Law Prohibits Deductions for Personal or Family Expenses

Many errors in the deductions allowed taxpayers are found in the Federal income tax returns. Deductible items are omitted and other items which are not deductible are included.

Deductions for business expenses are the principal deductions allowed, the law expressly prohibiting deductions for personal, living, or family expenses.

The revenue act provides that in computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions from gross income all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred in the taxable year in carrying on any trade, business, profession or vocation.

Typical expenses of a mercantile establishment are amounts paid for advertising, hire of clerks and other employes, rent, light, heat and water, telephone, insurance, delivery expenses, the cost of operating delivery wagons and motor trucks, and incidental repairs to such vehicles.

The expenses of a manufacturing business include labor, raw materials, supplies, repairs, light and heat, power, selling cost, administration and similar charges.

PROFESSIONAL MEN.

A professional man may claim as deductions the cost of supplies used by him in his practice, expenses paid in the operation and repair of an automobile used in making professional calls, dues to professional societies and subscriptions to professional journals, office rent, the expense of fuel, light, water and telephone used in such offices, and the hire of assistants.

A travelling man, working on salary or commission, is allowed to deduct certain business expenses. Reasonable and necessary travelling expenses include railroad fares and meals and lodging.

A travelling man working on salary without reimbursement for travelling expenses, or employed on a commission basis with no expense allowance, may deduct his expenses for railroad fare, and also his expenses for meals and lodging in an account in excess of the ordinary cost for such living expense when at home.

FARMER'S ALLOWANCE.

If he receives a salary and is repaid his actual traveling expenses, he must include as gross income an amount equal to the ordinary expense for meals and lodging when at home, as such amount is held to be additional compensation to the taxpayer. Payment for the use of a sample room for the display of goods is a business expense.

The farmer may deduct all amounts paid in the production, harvesting and marketing of crops, including labor, cost of seed and fertilizer used, cost of minor repairs to farm buildings (other than the dwelling), fences and machinery, and of small tools which are used up in the course of the year.

ERRONEOUS CLAIMS.

Taxpayers frequently make the mistake of claiming as deductions expenditures for articles more or less permanent in character or for permanent improvement of their property. In the case of the business man they include claims for the erection of new buildings or installation of machinery.

A farmer claims as a deduction the cost of a new threshing machine or tractor, or the expense of putting a new roof on his barn. Such deductions are expressly disallowed by the revenue act, and are held to be investments of capital.

ALLOWANCES FOR LOSSES.

Allowable deductions, in addition to business expenses, include losses sustained by the taxpayer in any transaction entered into for profit outside of his regular business.

A reasonable allowance is made for depreciation of business property, including obsolescence, and for the depletion of oil and gas and other natural deposits.

Contributions made during the year 1920 to corporations organized exclusively for charitable, scientific, religious, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, or the special fund for vocational rehabilitation, may be deducted to an amount not exceeding 15 per cent. of the taxayer's income, computed without the benefit of this deduction.

OTHER EXEMPTIONS.

Other items which may be deducted are as follows:

Taxes paid or accrued during the year 1920, except income war profits, or excess profits taxes, and those assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to improve the value of the taxpayer's property.

Losses of property not connected with trade or business arising from fires, or other casualty, or from theft, if not compensated for by insurance.

Debts ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the year 1920.

Interest paid or accrued on indebtedness, except interest incurred to purchase securities (other than securities of the United States issued subsequent to September, 24, 1917), the interest on which is exempt from tax.

CARSON ELECTED CITY CLERK OF SOMERVILLE

Assistant City Clerk Jason M. Carson of Somerville was unanimously elected city clerk at a meeting of the Somerville Board of Aldermen to succeed City Clerk Frederick W. Cook, who takes office as Secretary of State next Wednesday.

Mr. Carson has been assistant city clerk for the past five years. He was born in Somerville and has always lived in that city. He resides at No. 42 Vinal avenue.

STATE POLICE PROBING 3 EAST WEYMOUTH FIRES

State police and the Weymouth Board of Fire Engineers are investigating three fires believed to have been set by a firebug in Commercial square, East Weymouth, during the past few weeks.

The latest fire, which was confined to the garage owned by Samuel Schofield of Commercial street, East Weymouth, showed evidence of the work of an incendiary. A fuse led from the cellar to the upper part of the garage.

LOCAL BREVITIES

Full authority to order a strike if the proposed reduction in wages of lumber handlers in Boston yards goes through was vested in Business Agent Richard J. O'Donnell of the Lumber Teamsters' Union.

* * *

President Thomas F. Shine of the Boston Street Carmen's Union and Charles Clark, a retiring member of the executive board, were presented purses of gold at installation exercises in Fay Hall.

* * *

Joseph Sargent was installed as commander of Back Bay Post, American Legion. George C. Demeter is the new vice-commander; A. J. MacNeil, adjutant; Waldo M. Hunt, treasurer; Robert C. Parke, financial secretary; Dr. Arthur E. Austin, historian, and Gordon M. Moorman, sergeant-at-arms.

* * *

Schoolboy memories of forty-three years ago were reviewed at the banquet of the class of 1877, English High School, at the Hotel Westminster. About twenty-five members were present. George W. Evans presided and John F. Casey, principal emeritus, was a guest.

* * *

What a Spectacle! Western Union Defies Government

What an ignoble spectacle the quarrel between the United States and the Western Union Telegraph Company is presenting to the American people and to the people of the world! Here is a mere telegraph company, a fiction of the law, a creature of the law, a creature of some State of the Union, shaking its puny little fist in the face of this government, and obliging the government to send its soldiers and marines and ships of war up and down our coast, because the company had defied the government and had declared its intention to land its cables on our shores where it willed.

How astonished the people of all the great civilized nations of the world must be when they see such things happening in America. Every other great nation in the world owns and operates its own telegraph company as part of its postoffice system. In no other civilized country of any importance on this earth could such a thing happen as is happening today—a great big overgrown lummox of a government absolutely defied by a little public service corporation, called a telegraph company, which in other decently run countries is a mere department of a department of the government.

We let private interests run our railroads, run our telephone and telegraph companies, and run our cables, and then we let foreign governments censor our cable dispatches, eavesdrop upon the communications by cable between our government here and our government representatives abroad, and eavesdrop upon the communications between our business houses and their representatives abroad, so that the stranger knows what our government is doing and knows what our business men are doing and what their bids on foreign business are, and can communicate them to the rival business men of their own country.

Every day brings its evidence of the utter subserviency of this government to the government of the stranger, especially to Great Britain. It has now come to light that during the war and before we entered it, and while we were pretending that we were neutral and were enforcing our rights against the British as well as against the Germans, the British and the French cut the German cables not only between Germany and this country but between the Azores and this country—that is between Portugal and America, between two neutral ports—a thing which they had no more right to do than they had a right to come into this country and cut the telephone between the Army and the Navy Departments at Washington.

But Portugal was a little country and powerless, and was finally forced to declare for the allies, and the United States, though powerful, was, Gulliver-like, slumbering most of the time with the British worshippers tucked away in the strategic places of our departments.

But this is not the worst of it. The war has been over now for two years. The British and the French still hold these cables, and we are permitting it, and the British are still eavesdropping upon the secret communications between our government and their representatives, and between our business men and their representatives abroad.

The situation has become so bad that one almost feels that the State Department and the government generally is holding up trade relations with Russia merely in order that the British may grab it all before our business men get a chance. At least that is the way it is working out, and intelligent men are presumed to intend the results that must follow their course of action.

Boston Suffers From Being Too Self-Complacent

Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham's criticism of the disposition of Boston to "stick in the mud" seems to have aroused some interest and protest from quarters which have done fairly well in Boston.

Rev. Mr. Frothingham's disapproval of our tendency to let well enough alone interests the Boston American, because we have been protesting against this spirit for a good many years. Our self-satisfaction with things that are not at all satisfying and our humility when our position is not at all humble, has led us to become a provincial community, subject to exploitation like all provinces.

It has led us steadily down the list of the great cities of America in population and industry and commerce. It has caused us to permit our resources to be used for the upbuilding of other communities. It has caused us to submit to wretched railroad stations while our money is being spent to build beautiful stations in New York, where very much fewer people use them than our stations in Boston. It compels us to submit to the inconvenience and discomfort of having our great suburban population—the greatest in America, far greater than in New York—drawn by sooty, dirty, soft coal using locomotives, while the commuters in New York enjoy electric engines which draw them smoothly and spotlessly over clean roadbeds into beautiful stations. It allows us to continue to do business on little crooked and narrow streets and sidewalks, where the loss of time and nervous energy runs into the scores of millions of dollars in wastage every year.

We talk, we investigate, we resolve, we write reports, and then put them into pigeonholes and change the subject.

Peters Right in Refusing to Suspend Sprinkler Law

Mayor Peters is to be congratulated for his refusal to suspend until March 1st the operation of the law requiring the installation of automatic sprinklers in Boston tenement houses, although given authority so to do by the State Legislature.

The prevention of fire and its immediate control is one of our most important civic duties. Mere expense to a property owner or inconvenience to a comparatively small number of tenants is no excuse for the failure to carry out the provisions of the "automatic sprinkler law," compelling the use of the highly protective automatic sprinkler, tending to save the lives and property of the public at large.

More Truth Than Poetry

On the Way to Spring

By S. E. KISER

A SIGH is in the gypsy's breast,
The road is lonely still;
The icy wheel remains at rest
Old men who mumble peevishly
Think joy has taken wing,
But, having come through darkness, we
Are starting on to Spring.

THE wind blows with a sharpened edge,
Across the empty park;
There is no courting in the hedge,
No challenge from the lark;
The streams through silent valleys creep,
As if they had not learned
That, though the lilies are asleep,
The crest of Winter's turned.

LIKE giant mushrooms, stacks of straw
Give shelter to the flocks;
There is no solace they may draw
From calendars or clocks;
But, daily, as the sun goes down
He dallies and delays
Till all the windows in the town
Appear to be ablaze.

NO blossoms make the hillside glow,
No swallow dips or darts;
Upon their knuckles old men blow,
As if with heavy hearts;
But soon the gypsy and his band
Will find a song to sing,
For we have come through darkness, and
Are on the way to Spring.

A COMMON AMBITION

Generally, the young man wants to get the girl first and be worthy of her afterward.

BE PROMPT

Perhaps your ten minutes late may result in spoiling a whole day for the one you disappoint.

Perhaps rather than disarrange a whole day for the reason that an early appointment is not kept, it may be necessary to figure out the day without giving any consideration to you and your cause.

Is that what you want?

No, you want to get the attention you should have when and where you see fit to want it, isn't it true?

But you must stop and consider yourself in the shoes of the one who is expecting certain things from you at a certain time.

A few minutes earlier in the morning, more hewing to the line in concentration, and the ability to turn things off on schedule time are the vitally important features to success in any line.

Then, too, you feel so much more self-respecting when you come in anywhere strictly on time or even with a few minutes to spare.

Words are, after all, but sounds that die upon the ear; yet, when arranged by Reason, they live as Symphonies of Wisdom.

The various plans suggested to remedy the housing shortage have but one drawback—you can't move people into castles in the air.

No university has ever wrought a crown of learning that will cover the ears of an ass.

ON NEW Year's morning.
WHEN MOST good folks.
DON'T READ their papers.
I WROTE a tale.
OF A little girl.
A POOR little girl.
WHO WAS six years old.
FOUR YEARS ago.
AND BAD luck came.
AND SINCE that time.
SHE'S GONE about.
WITH ONE good leg.
AND A wooden leg.
AND BECAUSE she's poor.
IT CAME about.
THAT THE wooden leg.
IN ITS senseless way.
HAS STUMPED along.
FROM DAY to day.
AND YEAR to year.
WITHOUT ADDING an inch.
TO THE length of it.
AND SO you'll see.
AS SHE showed me.
THAT THE silly thing.
IS SHORTER now.
THAN IT used to be.
BY FOUR full inches.
OR MAYBE it is.
THAT THE other leg.
IS LONGER now.
THAN IT used to be.
BUT WHATEVER it is.
IT MATTERS not.
AND ALL she knows.
AND ALL I know.
IS THAT she needs.
A WOODEN leg.
THAT HAS sense enough.
TO BE as long.
AS THE other leg.
AND I said to her.
THAT I believed.
THAT MAYBE you.
WHO READ these lines.
WOULD LIKE to help.
AND SO I wrote.
ON NEW Year's Day.
AND SAD to tell.
ONLY SIX of you.
HAVE MADE response.
AND SO I come.
AND TELL again.
OF THE wooden leg.
THAT WOULDN'T grow.

I THANK you.

IT'S PERFECTLY OBVIOUS

CONSCIENCE THE REAL POLICE OF BOSTON

By Spectator

THE real police of this city is not composed of the men who wear uniforms and carry clubs; it is composed of Ideas.

If you will stop to think a minute, you will see that this must be so. For if every man, woman and child in the community, or even half of them, should suddenly go crazy or become criminal and take a notion, for instance, to burn down all the homes in the place, all the fire companies in the State could not prevent terrific loss.

Neither, if nine-tenths of the people in a town should be seized with a desire to murder somebody, could the other tenth do anything but run.

The inhabitants of a place are, in other words, at the mercy of the common will. They are safe in their beds because everybody except a very few has no desire to commit murder. Their windows are not broken by stones simply because stone-throwers are scarce. And women walk the streets in security because one who wishes to attack a women is a rare specimen.

Let the idea, in some miraculous way, be suddenly injected into the minds of the majority that looting a bank is proper, praiseworthy and good fun, and not all the locks, bars and steel grating of the best-guarded bank could protect it.

In a town where all the men are bandits there would be no bank.

You may sniff at sentiment, but it is sentiment alone that keeps your life and property safe. It is because that sentiment is almost universal that the insurance company can do business. Reach into the hearts of the people and weed out the sentiment that favors law and order, and there would ensue a wave of crime that would in no time sweep away all insurance companies, all police, all safeguards and leave destruction and chaos.

The real policemen, then, are those ideas which every mother is instilling into her children. Real policemen are being made in every schoolhouse, Sunday school, church and family.

The power to make mischief is very great. One lunatic with a bomb can wreck an office building and kill hundreds of people. A half dozen men by tinkering with the gas mains could blow up a city. The possibilities of horror and destruction by poison gases, by germs and by assassinations are appalling.

It is very easy to form wrong notions by reading the newspapers. These print what is unusual. For it is the unusual that is news; it is what people want to hear about.

In reading a paper one should always keep in mind that everything he reads is in the nature of an exception, and that if he wants a true idea of the condition of the community he must form one exactly the opposite to the evidence of the news.

A bank failure looms up on the first page. But there are hundreds of banks in town, and that item really ought to impress upon the reader the soundness of the ninety and nine.

A divorce scandal gets two columns and a scare head. The 50,000 couples, more or less, that are living along in peace and decency are not heard from.

And it is because the great body of men and women in the city are possessed by ideas of decency, honesty and order that stores are in no danger of pillage, houses are safe from incendiaries, little children are not brutally treated, unprotected women go about in safety and the city is free from terror.

Of course, it is necessary to arrest and lock up a person who is bent on homicide or arson, and there is need of policemen for that purpose.

But the the police no more give us law and order than the doctors give us health. Both are employed for the abnormal and exceptional.

What really keeps us in health is good blood, the tides of health and strength that flow from Nature—good food, exercise, air and sunshine. It is only when there is a breakdown, a maladjustment, accident or morbidity somewhere, that the doctor is called in.

As Nature is the real doctor, so Conscience is the real policeman. It is Conscience that stays the thug's arm, that holds back the clerk from the theft, that prevents the woman from soiling her honor, and that permeates the whole business and social fabric and "keeps the fretful world in awe."

This invisible policeman stands in every counting house and shop, pervades the crowd in the street, goes with a man to his work, follows him to his bed chamber and stands even in his breast, a silent, grim and unescapable—

"Representative of the Law."

KILLED DOG THEN SELF TO AVOID PARTING

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1921, by Star Company.

I HAVE received a number of letters calling my attention to the action of an aged man at Ashland, Wis., who killed his dog and then committed suicide because the authorities would not admit his dog with him to the county poor farm.

Offhand I might say that it is drawing it pretty strong when a man kills himself over a dog, but then I am not sixty-nine years old, and I have not gone through many years with a dog as my only companion, as was the case with John Smith of Ashland.

I think I understand something of his feelings. A dog you have had a long time gets mighty close to your heart. It takes on identity and personality possessed by no other creature, until it finally becomes to you not merely an animal, but something akin to a human being.

It is silly to get sentimental about a dog, of course, but that's the way we are.

John Smith was an old man. I judge from the fact that he was applying for admittance to a poor farm in the evening of his life that many vicissitudes had beset him.

Perhaps he had seen his human friends pass him by with no gleam of recognition in their eyes. Perhaps he never knew a kindly glance until he turned to look down at the animal trotting at his heels, to find in the orbs of the dog the light of sympathy and understanding.

Old men, especially very poor old men, get scant consideration in any community. Perhaps John Smith had been refused aid and comfort at human doors. Sickness may have overtaken him in some lonely hovel, with no friendly hand to soothe his brow, and there he may have felt the velvety caress of the dog's tongue licking his hot fingers and the warmth of the dog's body as it snuggled close to him in silent sympathy.

John Smith, I repeat, was an old man. The dog had grown old with him. To you and me, perhaps, it would have been a wheezy, grouchy, old beast that was better off dead than alive, but to John Smith it was a dear friend.

To you and me, perhaps, John Smith would have been a shabby, forlorn old fellow, slowly dragging his aged frame across the last few years of his existence, but to the dog, I warrant you, John Smith was the majestic, kindly figure of a fine master.

For a dog doesn't see a friend as you and I see him. A drunkard goes staggering home of an evening, and the neighbors, peering from behind the blinds, see him as a most disgraceful object, but his dog, waiting on the porch, leaps up barking joyfully, seeing only its pal.

A dog doesn't take the other side of the street when a friend is in trouble, however deep. A dog doesn't eat a friend's food and then slink out of the house at the first sign of distress. A dog doesn't prey on the estate of a dead comrade. A dog doesn't run around barking gossip about some one who has been kind to it.

A dog sticks through thick and thin, through hell and high water. A dog doesn't know whether you are poor or prosperous, and doesn't care. A man may go home to find his wife has rewarded his years of kindness to her by skipping with most of his worldly goods, but his dog comes tearing around the side of the house yelping a welcome.

I can understand something of old John Smith's feelings, all right. I have owned many dogs in my time. Of late years I have declared I will never own another. I get too strongly attached to them.

I have owned blooded sporting dogs of wide renown, and many just dogs. The last dog I owned was a foolish-looking, wholly useless Boston terrier that I brought over from Boston as a puppy in my pocket and reared with infinite care and no little expense in a New York city apartment.

The time came when I had to go away on a trip, and it was necessary to place "Denny" in a kennel until I returned. I shall never forget my remorse over leaving that no-account animal, that loved me to distraction, among strangers. I knew they wouldn't understand him, and he wouldn't understand them, and I couldn't have felt any worse had I been leaving a child.

I can see old man Smith now, aiming his gun into the only pair of eyes in which he found understanding, and I can feel something of the pain in his heart when he looked again through the powder smoke and saw lying there the shaggy body of what had been his last true friend on this earth.
